OPA Measure Seems Headed For Approval

Official Says Truman Has Indicated He Would Sign Compromise

Legislation Opens Way For Another Holiday On Price Ceilings

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—A rebirth of OPA, with curtailed powers, seemed assured today as an influential official said President Truman had indicated he would "reluctantly" sign compromise legislation which leaves undecided whether controls will be restored on a list of major foods.

The measure opens the way for another 30 days of holiday on price ceilings for meats, dairy products, grains, cottonseed and soybeans and food and feed products made from them. There is no assurance control will be restored on these items at all.

Chairman Spence (D-Ky.), of the House Banking committee, who led the administration battle for a strong OPA, said:

"I don't think it is a very effective bill, but it is the best we can do. I think the House and Senate will sign it as a last recourse."

However, OPA Administrator Paul Pearson declined to say whether he would recommend another veto.

Compromise Creates Board

The compromise finally arrived at last night by a House-Senate conference committee, breaking a five-day deadlock, does not restore price ceilings immediately on meats, dairy products, grains, cottonseed and soybeans and foods and feed products made from them.

However, it creates a three-man board with higher authority than OPA to determine whether these items shall be re-controlled. If this board fails to act by August 20, OPA then will have authority to restore the ceilings at its own election.

There was a difference of opinion among the conferees whether the bill they drafted would permit the control board to restore prices on these food items before August 20, under any circumstances. They will have another look at the measure tomorrow on that point, before tossing it to the House and Senate.

The board would, however, have authority to restore ceilings, prior to August 20 if it sees fit, on poultry, eggs, food and feed products made from them, tobacco and its products, and petroleum and its products.

Major Provisions

As the bill will go into the House and Senate Tuesday for showdown votes, here are the major provisions:

1. A year's continuation of modified price control, and rent authority unchanged. OPA would have all its old power to set rent ceilings.

2. A new pricing formula that will mean higher prices of many manufactured articles. This formula requires that producers, manufacturers and processors' ceilings be placed high enough to take care of the average increase in costs in their industry since 1940, plus 10 percent.

3. A stipulation that price ceilings shall be lifted when supply of an article or product comes into balance with demand and normal competitive forces are restored.

4. Removal from OPA of the power of final determination when such items shall be decontrolled, lodging this authority in the three-man board to be appointed by the president, subject to Senate confirmation. This is the same board that will determine whether meat

Dr. Francis Brown Says Program Needs Tighter Controls

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—Dr. Francis J. Brown, national authority on veteran education, said today some schools and employers are making a racket of the GI educational program in which $900,000,000 already has been spent.

Dr. Brown asserted in a report on veteran educational opportunities for the American Council of Public Affairs, that tight controls are needed over a program in which he predicted 2,000,000 veterans will participate by the end of next year.

Last week he was appointed executive secretary of President Truman's commission on higher education. He also is consultant for the American Council on Education.

The public affairs council is headed by a group of educators and scientists who have published non-profit books and pamphlets on current topics, including a series on veterans affairs.

In an interview, Dr. Brown said some schools increase fees and offer questionable courses "to get all they can" from the government.

He asserted some employers look upon the GI apprentice and on-the-job training program as a "gravy train" through which they can draw government subsidies.

GI educational laws permit the Veterans' Administration to regulate the veteran but not the school he attends, Dr. Brown said. He explained that the law leaves it to the states to inspect the schools receiving fees for GI training.

"But it fails to provide funds for this policing and therefore many states aren't doing it," he said.

Dr. Brown said it was impossible to say to what extent unscrupulous persons have profited through "questionable" but he said these methods had been found:

A flying school that split its training course into three parts. It could collect $500 per course for each veteran, a total of $1,500, instead of the $500 it had previously been paid for the entire course.

A shoe shop that hired men under the on-the-job training program, but gave the men no instruction other than what they were capable of picking up by watching.

PEARSON IS BOOED DURING ANTI-KLAN SPEECH AT ATLANTA

ATLANTA, July 21 (AP)—Drew Pearson, syndicated Washington columnist, made an anti-Klan speech on the steps of the Georgia capitol today and was booed and heckled.

A crowd estimated by police at 2,000 gathered on the statehouse grounds to hear the critic of the hooded order which has recently been revived in the South and elsewhere.

Pearson was introduced by Gov. Ellis Arnall, who has had the state legal department bring a suit to revoke the charter of the Ku Klux Klan in Georgia.

The newspaperman and radio commentator said that "history will ridicule and despise the fiery orator on Stone Mountain, because the fiery cross breaks faith with the cross on Calvary."

He referred to Stone Mountain, near here, which was the birthplace of the modern Ku Klux Klan. The secret order has frequently burned giant crosses on the huge exposed peak of granite.

Hedy Expects Another

HOLLYWOOD, July 21 (AP)—Raven-haired Hedy Lamarr and her husband, Actor John Leder, expect another "child," something next spring, the actress' studio announced today.

The couple, wed in 1943, have a daughter, Denise, 14 months old, and a son, James, seven, the latter adopted by Miss Lamarr during her marriage to writer Gene Markey.

By ARTHUR L. EDSON

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—This may come as a surprise to taxpayers but they have a cadastral engineer working for them.

President Truman says so, and he ought to know.

There is an idea that all government workers are either (a) letter jurgers, (b) stenographers, or (c) tax collectors.

But Mr. Truman says no. In addition to the cadastral engineer, there are 2,848,526 other employees. These include such characters as olericists, psychometricians, mycologists and nematologists.

On a less hallowed plane are the tea examiners, the vending stand specialists, the junior laborers and the experts hired by the supreme court. These fellows get $150 each year. They specialize in shoveling snow off the judicial sidewalks.

And don't forget the doorkeeper. He keeps door at the House of Representatives at $6,000 a year.

All these facts are in Mr. Truman's annual budget message. This bulky package has been around for quite a spell, but it takes time to study 976 pages of fine print.

This is the message, taxpayers may recall, in which Mr. Truman counted up the pocket change and said the United States would have to cut its household expenses to $35,860,000,000 in 1947.

This is the message, they may not recall, in which Mr. Truman said that exactly $3,860 of this $35,860,000,000 would be spent for a zymologist.

Mr. Truman didn't elaborate on what these people do for a living, but the dictionary gives some hints.

Cadastral engineer—surveys property for extent, value, ownership.

Olericist—A specialist on edible vegetables.

Psychometrician—Figures speed and precision of mental processes.

Mycologist—Studies fungi, or growths on plants.

Zymologist—Knows all the answers on fermentation.

Nematologist—An expert on round worms.

Ferguson Wants Additional Data On Pearl Harbor

But Michigan Republican Foresees No Attempt To Reopen Hearing

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich.) said today the State department should supplement Congress' Pearl Harbor reports with "diplomatic facts."

Ferguson said he was sure the joint committee which reported its findings on the December 7, 1941 debacle last night did not get all the information to which the public is entitled about international negotiations bearing on the inquiry.

But the Michigan Republican said the six-months-long hearing went as far as a congressional committee could go. He foresaw no attempt to reopen it during this or the next session. "It would be useless," he told a reporter.

Ferguson, who signed a minority report differing with the majority on who was to blame, complained also that Miss Grace Tully, secretary to the late President Roosevelt, was permitted to "screen" Mr. Roosevelt's official correspondence to determine which parts of it related to Pearl Harbor.

"Beneficial" Hearing

"I feel the hearing was very beneficial," the senator observed. "But I hope some day we will get all the diplomatic information. I would like to see the State department some day give out everything in relation to it."

The minority report, also signed by Sen. Brewster (R-Me.), contended that "the whole question of whether or not it would have been possible to avoid war by proper diplomatic action and thus avert the Pearl Harbor tragedy was left largely unexplored."

The majority report, signed by the other eight members of the committee, and the minority findings, are ready for the archives. They require no further action by Congress.

The majority laid sole blame on military men for the failure leading to the disaster. It declared that Mr. Roosevelt and his cabinet "discharged their responsibility with distinction, ability and foresight."

It asserted that the president and cabinet, Mr. Hull, his secretary of state, made every possible effort to avert war.

Short, Kimmel Criticized

The majority findings criticized the Pearl Harbor commanders, Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short and Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, and the war plans and intelligence divisions of the army and navy here.

Brewster and Ferguson contended responsibility should be shared by Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, Adm. Harold G. Stark, chief of naval operations, Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, chief of war plans, Short and Kimmel.

Rep. Keefe (R-Wis.), who signed the majority report, wrote a separate opinion contending that "secret diplomacy" was at the root of the tragedy, and that the report had sought "to throw a soft light as possible on the Washington scene."

Arthur Greiser Dies On Gallows

By LARRY ALLEN

POZNAN, Poland, July 21 (AP)—Weak-kneed and solemnly mumbling prayers, one-time Nazi Gauleiter Arthur Greiser, who said he wanted to live "to tell the whole truth," was hanged from a newly erected gallows in Citadel Place early today before a crowd of 15,000.

The swaggering former Nazi ruler of Poznan province and Nazi president of the prewar Gdansk (Danzig) senate who sent thousands to the gallows and collaborated in aggressive war against Poland, mounted the scaffold between two policemen at 7 a. m.

The black-garbed, white-gloved hangman quickly slung the noose around Greiser's neck, and the trap was sprung.

Although his neck was broken, Greiser continued to squirm for seven minutes before physicians pronounced him dead.

His hands and legs tied, Greiser was spared looking into the faces of many whom he persecuted as a "traitor," both ranged from a newly erected gallows in Citadel Place early today before a crowd of 15,000.

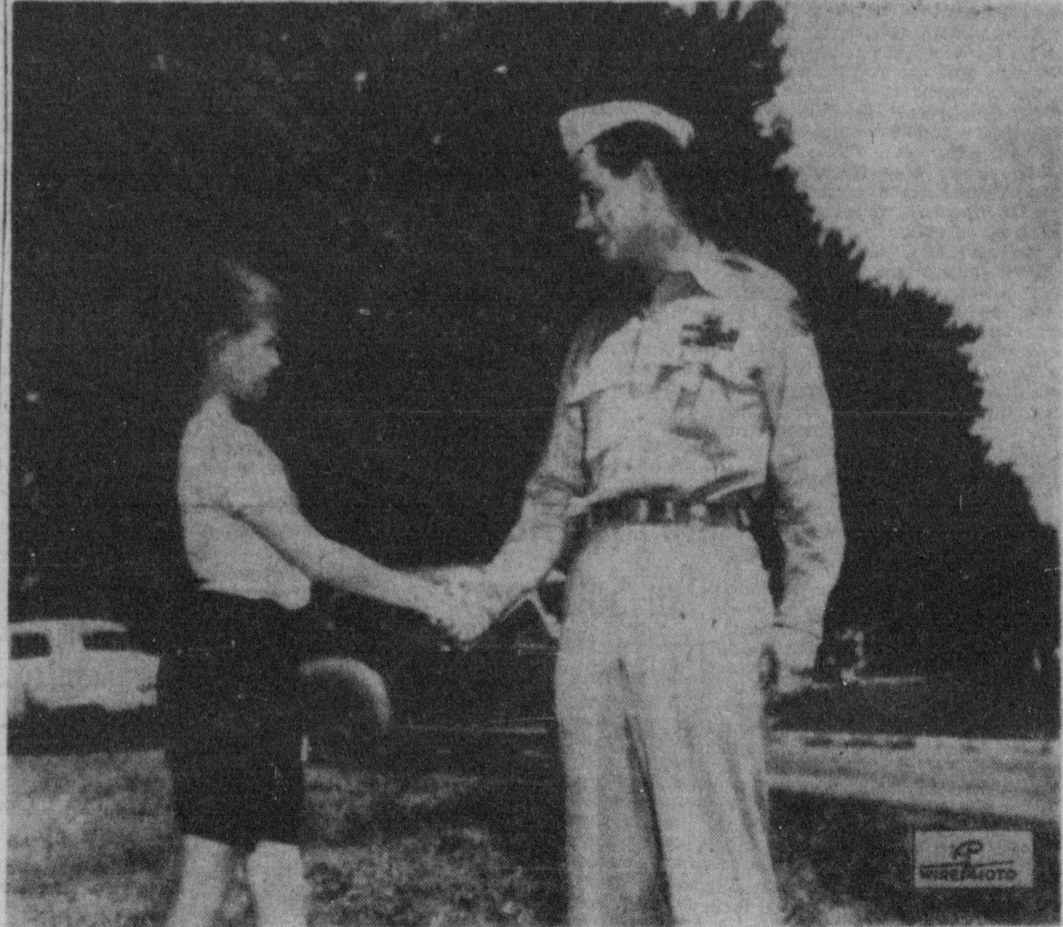

The throng watched silently as Greiser went to his death—the first person in Poland to be executed on the basic charge of waging aggressive war against the country.

THANKS FOR THE SHOW—Russell Gutting, 11, ill and unable to attend Omaha's "World's Fair of Aviation," thanks Col. The lad was dressed and carried outside for the occasion.

Army Pilots Put On Special Show For Bedfast Lad

11-Year-Old Boy Gets Thrill Of Life Plus Autographs

OMAHA, July 21 (AP)—A bedfast, 11-year-old Omaha boy got the thrill of his life today when army pilots participating in the "World's Fair of Aviation" here put on a special show for him—right over his house.

For nearly half an hour, fliers under the command of Col. Dave Schilling, wartime fighter ace, did their stuff while Russell Gutting, 11, with a virus infection, watched in awe.

His father, Clarence Gutting, carried him out to the boulevard parking lot in front of their house for the command and performance which brought residents of the quiet neighborhood out on their lawns.

Maj. Gen. William E. Kepner, commander of the army's share of Operation Crossroads, said at a news conference that since the submarine detonation would affect the air less severely than the bomb, he had ordered the aircraft to be able to go much nearer.

Even commercial planes will be allowed closer—they can come within 400 miles of Bikini rather than the 500-miles limit of July 1.

While the air force in the next test will have nothing to do with actually discharging the bomb, Kepner said some 70 planes would be in the air at altitudes from six to 18,000 feet, plus the one at 30,000.

Photographic planes will take pictures at intervals throughout the day and night. This, he said, was intended to give a periodic check of the condition of ships, since radioactive waters are expected to prevent early inspection from the surface.

James Roosevelt's Election Is Conceded

SACRAMENTO, July 21 (AP)—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late president, won the endorsement of a Southern California Democratic tonight for election as state chairman of the Democratic Central Committee, by a 200 to 107 vote.

The endorsement of the section of the state which is entitled, by rotation, to the chairmanship, is equivalent to election by the entire committee and his election later tonight was conceded.

Roosevelt's victory over Thomas P. Scully, Los Angeles Democratic leader, came after a night and day of political maneuvering at the party's biennial state convention and meeting of the newly-elected central committee.

Five bodies were recovered from the area where the plane plunged into the sea.

The planes collided yesterday afternoon while searching for three pursuit craft which were lost in a violent storm Thursday.

UNDERWATER A-BOMB TEST MAY BE DELAYED

BIKINI LAGOON, Monday, July 22 (AP)—The atomic bomb test to measure the destructive forces of an underwater explosion may be delayed at least a week because of an adverse weather outlook.

Vice Adm. William H. P. Blandy said today.

The task force commander came aboard the Apalachian in Bikini lagoon with members of his staff for a press conference.

He took that occasion to deny once more that the first test July 1 exploded prematurely, declaring "I want to say that the Able day bomb exploded within 50 feet of the desired altitude."

Drone Will Fly Over Atom Blast

KWAJALEIN, July 21 (AP)—A radio-controlled "drone" plane will fly at 5,000 feet directly over the explosion of the underwater atomic bomb at Bikini, July 25 while a manned plane will pass over at 30,000 feet.

Maj. Gen. William E. Kepner announced today.

Kepler, commander of the army's share of Operation Crossroads, said at a news conference that since the submarine detonation would affect the air less severely than the bomb, he had ordered the aircraft to be able to go much nearer.

Arms Shipments To China May Be Stopped By U. S.

Washington Fears Chiang May Attempt To Smash Communists

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—Top American officials have been considering a shutdown on shipments of arms and munitions to the Chinese government, but they learned today, in the hope that such a move might assist their efforts to unify China.

Possession of large quantities of American lend-lease weapons is reported here to have persuaded extreme nationalist elements of the government that they could smash the Communists in a six or eight weeks drive, and they want to try it.

That would mean full scale civil war and a disastrous defeat for United States foreign policy aimed at creating a unified, strong China.

Chiang Favors Drive, Report Says

According to one report which responsible officials here consider accurate, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek himself has come to this point of view.

Chiang was said to feel that Gen. George C. Marshall, President Truman's special envoy, might be eased out of China with much face-saving all around if he would accept some sort of "compromise peace" formula, which would in fact leave the government free to act against the Communists when ready.

Those who know Marshall and his work in China say he will accept no such deal. If he fails, he will say so frankly, these authorities predicted, and he will stay on in China as long as he can be useful either (1) in following through every last hope for Chinese unity or (2) in helping re-direct American foreign policy if all peace efforts fail.

$1,500,000,000 Of Lend-Lease

It appears to have been largely in a mood of desperation that officials here took up the question of halting arms shipments to Chiang Kai-Shek's forces. Chiang received lend-lease supplies throughout the war. After V-J day these continued so that his forces might help deal with the defeated Japanese in China and recapture Chinese territory. Later the shipments have continued, with the idea of strengthening China as a stabilizing force in Asia.

Altogether the Chinese probably have received more than $1,500,000,000 of lend-lease aid including arms. This went to the nationalists, not the Communists. The Communists have been fairly well armed with captured Japanese equipment which the Russians left after the Manchurian, but Chiang's troops are much better off.

AVC Moves To Revive Enlistment Of Negroes

WASHINGTON, July 22 (AP)—The American Veterans Committee said today it will ask President Truman to revoke last week's order by the War department suspending enlistment of negroes.

Charles G. Bolte, national chairman, said AVC challenged the department's statement that the suspension was based on the army's policy of limiting negroes in the army to the ration at which they occur in the civilian population, about 10 to 1. The army said enlistments were at the rate of about 5 to 1.

Colleagues Expect May To Keep Mum

Kentucky Legislator May Be "Too Busy" To Heed Summons

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—House colleagues of Rep. May (D-Ky.) said today they expect him to refuse—at least temporarily—to heed a Senate War Investigation committee summons to explain his wartime intervention on behalf of an Illinois munitions combine.

These sources, declining to permit use of their names, reported that May, barring a change of mind over the weekend, would stand on his constitutional rights as a member of Congress and say that he is "too busy" with legislative duties to attend.

Groundwork for such a move on May's part was laid last night with an announcement that he had referred to an attorney the technicalities of the call to testify.

The House military committee chairman said he had been too busy to attend to the matters himself.

The congressional associates of the Kentucky legislator said he was "considering" an offer to appear at some time in the indefinite future, probably after Congress adjourns, but stipulating again the right to have an attorney at his side and the power to call his own witnesses.

The committee's subpoena directed May to appear for questioning Tuesday. No provision was made to meet the conditions he set up for his testimony.

Meanwhile the committee called for Justice department records of its inquiry into a $2,500 check described by Rep. May (D-Wash.) as a "campaign contribution" from Elvind Anderson, Washington defense contractor, in 1941.

Sen. Brewster (R-Me.) termed Coffee's explanation of the check a "belated alibi" and said the Washington legislator would be asked for a formal explanation. "The more quickly he appears, the better."

In Washington state, Coffee said that he would "welcome" an inquiry into the whole matter. He added that the Justice department already had investigated and found "no basis for action."

DECLINING PRICES, BOXCAR SHORTAGE RETARD GRAIN FLOW

KANSAS CITY, Kas., July 22 (AP)—Declining prices and continuing shortage of boxcars in some sections tended to retard the flow of grain off farms in the nation's biggest wheat-producing state, Kansas, during the past week.

The bulk of wheat now, however, is under cover and ample storage space has been reported by large grain elevator operators. But because of the boxcar shortage much grain is still piled on the ground—with some of it spoiling.

Some elevator operators said they expected farmers who have home-storage facilities to hold the wheat for higher prices. They declared that many farmers have expressed dissatisfaction with the price, which fell steadily during the last week.

No. 2 dark hard wheat sold on the Kansas City market last week from $1.94 to $2.08, as compared with a recent top of $2.12 which was up about 20 cents since OPA ceiling prices went off July 1.

Joe Fleming, Hutchinson, Kas., vice president of the Gano chain of 60 retail stores, estimated that 60 per cent of this year's wheat crop is still on the farms.

"Beneficial" Hearing

"I feel the hearing was very beneficial," the senator observed. "But I hope some day we will get all the diplomatic information, I would like to see the State department some day give out everything in relation to it."

The minority report, also signed by Sen. Brewster (R-Me.), contended that "the whole question of whether or not it would have been possible to avoid war by proper diplomatic action and thus avert the Pearl Harbor tragedy was left largely unexplored."

The majority report, signed by the other eight members of the committee, and the minority findings, are ready for the archives. They require no further action by Congress.

The majority laid sole blame on military men for the failures leading to the disaster. It declared that Mr. Roosevelt and his cabinet "discharged their responsibility with distinction, ability and foresight."

It asserted that the president and his cabinet made every possible effort to avert war.

Short, Kimmel Criticized

The majority findings criticized the Pearl Harbor commanders, Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short and Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, and the war plans and intelligence divisions of the army and navy here.

Brewster and Ferguson contended responsibility should be shared by Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff; Adm. Harold C. Stark, chief of naval operations; Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, chief of war plans; Short and Kimmel.

Rep. Keefe (R-Wis.) who signed the majority report, wrote a separate opinion contending that "secret diplomacy was at the root of the tragedy" and that the report had sought "to throw a soft light as possible on the Washington scene."

Arthur Greiser Dies On Gallows

By LARRY ALLEN

POZNAN, Poland, July 21 (AP)—Weak-kneed and solemnly mumbling prayers, one-time Nazi Gauleiter Arthur Greiser, who said he wanted to live "to tell the truth," was hanged from a newly-erected scaffold in Citadel Place early today before a crowd of 15,000.

The swastika-bedecked Nazi ruler of Poznan province and Nazi president of the prewar Gdansk (Danzig) senate who sent thousands to death camps and collaborated in aggressive war against Poland, mounted the scaffold between two policemen at 7 a. m.

The black-garbed, white-gloved hangman quickly slung the noose around Greiser's neck, and the trap was sprung.

Although his neck was broken, Greiser continued to squirm for seven minutes before physicians pronounced him dead.

His hands and legs tied, Greiser was spared looking into the faces of many whom he persecuted as a black cloth was placed over his eyes. He wore the same neat suit which he had worn daily during a fortnight's trial before the national tribunal.

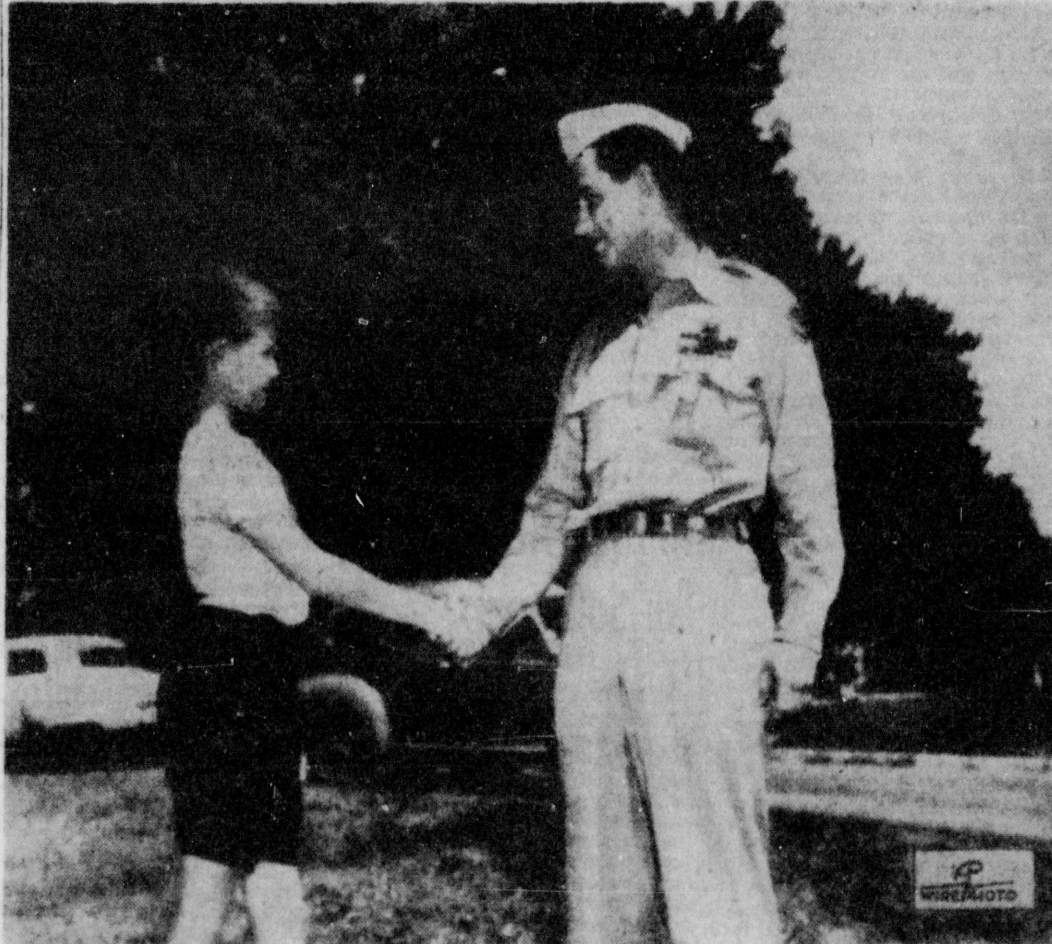

The throng watched silently as Greiser went to his death—the first person in Poland to be executed on the basic charge of waging aggressive war against the country.

THANKS FOR THE SHOW—Russell Gutting, 11, ill and unable to attend Omaha's "World's Fair of Aviation," thanks Col. Dave Schilling, wartime fighter ace, for the special air show which planes from Schilling's famous 56th fighter group staged over the boy's home here yesterday. The lad was dressed and carried outside for the occasion.

Army Pilots Put On Special Show For Bedfast Lad

11-Year-Old Boy Gets Thrill Of Life Plus Autographs

OMAHA, July 21 (AP)—A bedfast, 11-year-old Omaha boy got the thrill of his life today when army pilots participating in the "World's Fair of Aviation" here put on a special show for him—right over his house.

For nearly half an hour, fliers under the command of Col. Dave Schilling, wartime fighter ace, did their stuff while Russell Gutting, ill with a virus infection, watched in wide-eyed awe.

His father, Clarence Gutting, carried him out to the boulevard parking lot in front of their house for the command performance which brought residents of the quiet neighborhood out on their lawns and was as much of a treat for inhabitants of a nearby old people's home as it was for Russell.

Russell had looked forward for weeks to seeing the aviation fair, but a month ago he became ill. Yesterday he asked his father to go to the field, tell him all about the show, and perhaps—oh boy!—bring back the autographs of a couple of pilots.

When Col. Schilling heard about Gutting's search for autographs, he called his men together and told them the story. They promptly voted a special show for the lad and, at the end of their afternoon performance at the fair, arranged to call at Russell's home to give him not only their autographs but a model power plane that they chipped in to buy.

Col. Schilling even got a P-51 jet plane to open the special show, swooping down over Russell with a thunderous roar. Then came five P-51s and four P-47s, opening their part of the performance with a close formation swoop down the boulevard as they saluted the youngster.

"He was so thrilled, I don't think he'll get over it for weeks," said his mother. "It might be just the thing to help him get well."

The planes collided yesterday afternoon while searching for three pursuit craft which were lost in a violent storm Thursday.

James Roosevelt's Election Is Conceded

SACRAMENTO, July 21 (AP)—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late president, won the endorsement of a Southern California Democratic caucus tonight for election as state chairman of the Democratic Central Committee, by a 200 to 107 vote.

The endorsement of the section of the state which is entitled, by rotation, to the chairmanship, is equivalent to election by the entire committee and his election later tonight was conceded.

Roosevelt's victory over Thomas P. Scully, Los Angeles Democratic leader, came after a night and day of political maneuvering at the party's biennial state convention and meeting of the newly-elected central committee.

AVC Moves To Revive Enlistment Of Negroes

WASHINGTON, July 22 (AP)—The American Veterans Committee said today it will ask President Truman to revoke last week's order by the War department suspending enlistment of negroes.

Charles G. Bolte, national chairman, said AVC challenged the department's statement that the suspension was based on the army's policy of limiting negroes in the army to the station at which they occur in the civilian population, about 10 to 1. The army said enlistments were at the rate of about 5 to 1.

UNDERWATER A-BOMB TEST MAY BE DELAYED

BIKINI LAGOON, Monday, July 22 (AP)—The atomic bomb test to measure the destructive forces of an underwater explosion may be delayed at least a week because of an adverse weather outlook, Vice Adm. William H. P. Blandy said today.

The task force commander came aboard the Apolonia in Bikini lagoon with members of his staff for a press conference.

He took that occasion to deny once more that the first test July 1 exploded prematurely, declaring "I want to say that the Able day bomb exploded within 50 feet of the desired altitude."

Drone Will Fly Over Atom Blast

KWAJALEIN, July 21 (AP)—A radio-controlled "drone" plane will fly at 5,000 feet directly over the explosion of the underwater atomic bomb at Bikini, July 25 while a manned plane will pass over at 30,000 feet, Maj. Gen. William E. Kepner announced today.

Kepner, commander of the army's share of Operation Crossroads, said at a news conference that since the surface detonation would affect the air less severely than did the aerial burst of July 1, all aircraft would be able to go much nearer to the blast.

Even commercial planes will be allowed closer—they can come within 400 miles of Bikini rather than the 500-miles limit of July 1.

While the air force in the next test will have nothing to do with actually discharging the bomb, Kepner said some 70 planes would be in the air at altitudes from six to 18,000 feet, plus the one at 30,000.

Photographic planes will take pictures at intervals throughout the day and night. This, he said, was intended to give a periodic check of the condition of ships, since radioactive waters are expected to prevent early inspection from the surface.

Colleagues Expect May To Keep Mum

Kentucky Legislator May Be "Too Busy" To Heed Summons

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—House colleagues of Rep. May (D-Ky.) said today they expect him to refuse—at least temporarily—to heed a Senate War Investigation committee summons to explain his wartime intervention on behalf of an Illinois munitions combine.

These sources, declining to permit use of their names, reported that May, barring a change of mind over the weekend, would stand on his constitutional rights as a member of Congress and say that he is "too busy" with legislative duties to attend.

Groundwork for such a move on May's part was laid last night with an announcement that he had referred to an attorney the technicalities of the call to testify.

The House Military committee chairman said he had been too busy to attend to the matters himself.

Congressional associates of the Kentucky legislator said he was "considering" an offer to appear at some time in the indefinite future, probably after Congress adjourns, but stipulating again the right to have an attorney at his side and the power to call his own witnesses.

The committee's subpoena directed May to appear for questioning Tuesday. No provision was made to meet the conditions he set up for his testimony.

Meanwhile the committee called for Justice department records of its inquiry into a $2,500 check described by Rep. Coffey (D-Wash.) as a "campaign contribution" from Elvord Anderson, Washington defense contractor, in 1941.

Sen. Brewster (R-Me.) termed Coffey's explanation of the check a "baited alibi" and said the Washington legislator would be asked for a formal explanation. "The more quickly he appears, the better."

In Washington state, Coffey said that he would "welcome" an inquiry into the whole matter. He added that the Justice department already had investigated and found "no basis for action."

DECLINING PRICES, BOXCAR SHORTAGE RETARD GRAIN FLOW

KANSAS CITY, Kas., July 22 (AP)—Declining prices and a continuing shortage of boxcars in some sections tended to retard the flow of grain off farms in the nation's biggest wheat-producing state, Kansas, during the past week.

The bulk of wheat now, however, is under cover and ample storage space has been reported by large grain elevator operators. But because of the boxcar shortage much grain is still piled on the ground—some rotting and spoiling.

Some elevator operators said they expected farmers who have home storage facilities to hold the wheat for higher prices. They declared that many farmers have expressed dissatisfaction with the price, which fell steadily during the last week.

No. 2 dark hard wheat sold on the Kansas City market last week from $1.94 to $2.08, as compared with a recent top of $2.12 which was up about 20 cents since OPA ceiling prices went off July 1.

Joe Fleming, Hutchinson, Kas., vice president of the Gano chain of 90 elevators, estimated that 60 or 70 per cent of this year's wheat crop is still on the farms.

Wounded Veterans Have Holiday, '52 Organization' Foots Bill

By FRANK K. KELLY

NEW YORK, July 21 (AP)—Up in Central park on a summer evening a little band played bouncy music, waiters hurried around, and young men who had defended America in the years of battle sat happily at a table with men who were going to guard the peace.

"So I had me a shirt made from that old parachute," said an ex-paratrooper from New Jersey who was wounded at Bastogne. "Feel that, it's real nylon. I sure let me down easy."

For a night's holiday in New York, the bus had brought a dozen soldiers from the hospital at Camp Kilmer, N. J. Half the men had been wounded in action, and half were new soldiers suffering from minor injuries, waiting their turn to serve overseas.

"I got a piece of a bomb in my shoulder, over in New Georgia," a skinny sergeant from Milwaukee said to the man next to him. "Nah, not New Guinea. Nobody ever heard of New Georgia, but that's where it was."

The other soldier muttered: "I've only been in six months. Had a bad ear. When they get it fixed up, I guess I'll go across."

In the tavern garden the soldiers sat at a long table decorated with flowers and glistening rows of bottles filled with cold beer. At the head of the table was a solid middle-aged man who had been married 17 years and had no sons. He was the host.

"This guy came into the ward and they put him in the bed right next to me and we got to gassing, and it was funny, we turned out to be cousins," a round-faced soldier said seriously across the table.

The heavy-set man fingered the silver numerals "52" in the lapel of his coat, and signalled the waiters. "All right, boys, order up. I want steak, turkey, lobster, you name it and you can have it."

Villarreal's Body Is Strung Up From Post

Student-Led Forces Thwart President's Plans To Escape

LA PAZ, Bolivia, July 21 (AP)—Victorious revolutionaries overthrew the government of President Gualberto Villarreal today and twice hanged the body of the Bolivian "strong man" from a lamp-post after thwarting his eleven-hour plans to escape by plane.

The second time the student-led revolutionary forces strung Villarreal's body up from a post adjacent to one which held the body of Luis Triunfo, undersecretary of the presidency.

The enraged revolutionaries tore the clothes off Villarreal's body. Subsequently the president's body was draped over a tank and paraded through the streets. The revolutionists credited this display with taking most of the fight out of those groups of his followers who had continued to resist.

There was no exact description of how the president met his death, but some sources said he was thrown from a balcony into a street filled with surging people.

Three Days Of Battle

Armed with weapons they had seized from government strongholds, the revolutionists deployed throughout La Paz and its environs seeking other leading figures in the Villarreal government who had escaped.

A revolutionist radio called on the students to organize armed crowds to prevent looting and barbarous actions.

Even while fighting was continuing against scattered pockets of resistance, the revolutionists formed an institutional government. They also regrouped their forces to prevent counter-revolution and released imprisoned political prisoners.

During three days of fighting hundreds of people were believed killed or wounded. There were no exact casualty figures but deaths were reported to have been high, particularly among the workers and students who made up the back-bone of the revolutionary force. Women and children also took part in the uprising.

Villarreal almost made good his escape. While the revolutionists were advancing toward the center of the city, the radio station on the government building asked the air base to send cars to pick up the president and some members of his government and take them to the waiting plane. This broadcast said the president's party would shoot its way clear with machine guns.

Quickly, the revolutionists erected barricades in adjacent streets and launched an attack on the government building.

Wives Are Advised To Drop Nagging For Soft Soap

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I wonder what would happen if some of these wives who have unappreciative husbands suddenly stopped nagging at them and quivered at them about it and tried to quieten them up?

I don't mean that these wives haven't plenty to quarrel about, nor much excuse for their nagging. But since that approach doesn't help matters, it might be a good idea to try another and see what would happen. Sometimes by handing out a little soft soap instead of hard words, the recipient is surprised and shamed into better behavior. And there's nothing to be lost by trying such tactics.

That's what I'd suggest to the troubled wife who writes this letter:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a housewife and mother of six children.

"My husband is a good worker, but he lives only for his work. He never takes time to go to church or to consider my feelings at any time. We are always at odds with each other. He disagrees continually with us all, never appreciating anything that is done for him. No matter what food we have, or how it is fixed, he always complains about it and wants something different.

"I have thought of leaving him several times in the 22 years we have been married, but it seems like I just can't start. But in my opinion, it would do him good.

"My oldest girl is married, and my youngest child is 6 years old. My husband seems to love him in his curious way. But I know he couldn't love me, or he would be different. If the children go anywhere, especially the girls, he calls me all kinds of names. I have ceased to care how he takes what I do, and just go on from day to day, dreading every minute with him. Life is too short to be spent that way. I have asked him to go away for awhile, but he just stays on and makes my life miserable.

"I have done the best I can to be a good wife and mother.

"If I have failed, I can't help it. He blames all his misfortunes on me, saying it's my fault because he hasn't got more. But in my heart, and the children's, I know it isn't my fault.

"Please tell me what to do. Must I go or stay?"

"E.S."

I am sure you have done your best to be a good wife and mother, and there is, indeed, nothing so discouraging as to do your best at anything and apparently meet with nothing but failure. And it is quite true, too, that life is too short, as you say, to be spent in an atmosphere of bitterness and unhappiness.

Something To Think About

But what will you do if you leave your husband? Will you have any trouble getting money from him to support yourself and the children? Or do you think you can get work and support your family yourself? This is something that you had better think over carefully before deciding to leave your home.

It will be very hard to do, I know, but I would like to see you try the plan I suggested at the beginning of this column before you call it a day with your husband. That is, give him praise and wherever you possibly can, and make up your mind you won't quarrel with him over the other things. Set a definite period for trying this out—say a month, to start with—and then let me know what happens. I have a feeling you may find it makes things a little easier, for you know it is very likely that your husband loves you too in that "curious way" of his, and that gentleness from you might succeed where quarrels have failed.

Multiple Sclerosis Termed Serious Nervous Disorder

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FOR a long time, doctors have recognized a disease of the nervous system called multiple sclerosis without being able to do much about it.

They know that it causes the formation of scar tissue in various parts of the nervous system, sometimes here, sometimes there, often in many places at once. But in spite of much study they have not yet been able to discover its exact cause.

Afflicting More People

And that it is a pity because this disease seems, for some unknown reason, to be afflicting more people now than ever before. According to Dr. Johannes M. Nielsen of Los Angeles, it is the most common organic disease of the nervous system occurring in Europe and is becoming much more common in the United States.

It is found most often in Switzerland and northern Europe, but is virtually unknown among the yellow races. It occurs as often in one sex as in the other, usually in persons between 40 and 50 years of age. Occupation seems to have no influence on the disease. Some think that diet may be a factor in causing it.

Symptoms Varied

The symptoms of multiple sclerosis vary to a great extent, depending on what parts of the nervous system are affected. There may be mental symptoms in a few cases. Disturbances of the eyesight are present in about one out of six instances, as the earliest symptoms to occur.

Later on, eye troubles develop in about one-half of the patients. There may be numbness and tingling of the face or paralysis of some of the face muscles. Ringing in the ears is a common symptom. Paralysis of the tongue is also a frequent symptom. As a general rule, it is not difficult to make a diagnosis by a careful examination of the nervous system.

It is unfortunate that no treatment has been found for multiple sclerosis which is particularly successful. Preparations of arsenic are frequently used. It is suggested that a diet high in fats be employed. Vitamin preparations are also given, but do not seem to have a great deal of value except in temporarily relieving some of the symptoms.

According to Dr. Nielsen, one of the latest forms of treatment is to give a substance known as histamine diphosphate by injection into the veins. The preparation is dissolved in salt solution which is slowly injected over a period of two hours.

Bad reactions to this treatment occur but rarely. Sometimes injections of whole blood into a vein are of value, but much more research is needed to give the best answer in treatment of this disorder. Perhaps its increasing frequency will act as a spur to the gaining of knowledge needed for its final conquest.

Wives Are Advised To Drop Nagging For Soft Soap

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I wonder what would happen if some of these wives who have unappreciated husbands suddenly dropped nagging at them and quarreling with them about it and tried buttering them up?

I don't mean that these wives haven't plenty to quarrel about, nor much excuse for their nagging. But since that approach doesn't help matters, it might be a good idea to try another, and see what would happen. Sometimes by handing out a little soft soap instead of hard words, the recipient is surprised and ashamed into better behavior. And there's nothing to be lost by trying such tactics.

That's what I'd suggest to the troubled wife who writes this letter.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a housewife and mother of six children.

"My husband is a good worker, but he lives only for his work. He never takes time to go to church or to consider my feelings at any time. He is always at odds with each other. He disobeys continually with us all, never appreciating anything that is done for him. No matter what food we have, or how it is fixed, he always complains about it and wants something different.

"I have thought of leaving him several times in the 22 years we have been married, but it seems like I just can't get started. But in my opinion, it would do him good.

"My oldest girl is married, and my youngest child is 6 years old. My husband seems to love him in his curious way. But I know he couldn't love me or he would be different. If the children go anywhere, especially the girls, he calls me all kinds of names. I have ceased to care how he takes what I do, and just go on from day to day, dreading every minute with him. Life is too short to be spent that way. I have asked him to go away for awhile, but he just stays on and makes my life miserable.

"I have done the best I can to be a good wife and mother.

"If I have failed, I can't help it. He blames all his misfortunes on me, saying it's my fault because he isn't good more. But in my heart, and the children's, I know it isn't my fault.

"Please tell me what to do. Must I go or stay?

"E.S."

I am sure you have done your best to be a good wife and mother, and there is, indeed, nothing so disheartening as to do your best at anything and apparently meet with nothing but failure. And it is quite true, too, that life is too short, as you say, to be spent in an atmosphere of bitterness and unhappiness.

Something To Think About

But what will you do if you leave your husband? Will you have any trouble getting money from him to support yourself and the children? Or do you think you can get work and support your family yourself? This is something that you had better think over carefully before deciding to leave your home.

It will be very hard to do, I know, but I would like to see you try the plan I suggest in the beginning of this column before you call it a day with your husband. That is, give him praise and wherever you possibly can, and make up your mind you won't quarrel with him over the other things. Set a definite period for trying this out—a month, to start with—and then let me know what happens. I have a feeling you may find it makes things a little easier, for you know it is very likely that your husband loves you too in that "curious way" of his, and that gentleness from you might succeed where quarrels have failed.

Multiple Sclerosis Termed Serious Nervous Disorder

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FOR a long time, doctors have recognized a disease of the nervous system called multiple sclerosis without being able to do much about it.

They know that it causes the formation of scar tissue in various parts of the nervous system, sometimes here, sometimes there, often in many places at once. But in spite of much study, they have not yet been able to discover its exact cause.

Afflicting More People

And that it is a pity because this disease seems, for some unknown reason, to be afflicting more people now than ever before. According to Dr. Johannes M. Nielsen of Los Angeles, it is the most common organic disease of the nervous system occurring in Europe and is becoming much more common in the United States.

It is found most often in Switzerland and northern Europe, but is virtually unknown among the yellow races. It occurs as often in one sex as in the other, usually in persons between 40 and 50 years of age. Occupation seems to have no influence on the disease. Some think that diet may be a factor in causing it.

Symptoms Varied

The symptoms of multiple sclerosis vary to a great extent, depending on what parts of the nervous system are affected. There may be mental symptoms in a few cases. Disturbances of the eyesight are present in about one out of six instances, as the earliest symptoms to occur.

Later on, eye troubles develop in about one-half of the patients. There may be numbness and tingling of the face or paralysis of some of the face muscles. Ringing in the ears is a common symptom. Paralysis of the tongue is also a frequent symptom. As a general rule, it is not difficult to make a diagnosis by a careful examination of the nervous system.

It is unfortunate that no treatment has been found for multiple sclerosis which is particularly successful. Preparations of arsenic are frequently used. It is suggested that a diet high in fats be employed. Vitamin preparations are also given, but do not seem to have a great deal of value except in temporarily relieving some of the symptoms.

According to Dr. Nielsen, one of the latest forms of treatment is to give a substance known as histamine dihydrochloride by injection into a vein. The preparation is dissolved in salt solution which is slowly injected over a period of two hours.

Bad reactions to this treatment occur but rarely. Sometimes injections of whole blood into a vein are of value, but much more research is needed to give the best answer in treatment of this disorder. Perhaps its increasing frequency will act as a spur to the gaining of knowledge needed for its final conquest.

Heavy Coal Trucks Damaging Several County Roadways

Engineer Says Original Construction Was For Lighter Traffic

Heavily loaded coal trucks operating from strip-mine operations in this county are causing damage to many sections of county roadways, according to John H. Carscaden, county engineer.

Abolishing the truck operators and mining companies of any blame, Carscaden declared the fault lies in the fact that the roads were not constructed to handle such heavy vehicles in the first place, and were designed as "farm to market" roads. They were never intended to accommodate heavily laden coal trucks, the engineer declared.

Roads being ruined include the Ball Knob back of Mt. Savage, the Michaels road near Westport, the Miller road near Barton and the Butcher Run road, also in the vicinity of Barton.

WPA Work Criticized
Carscaden also revealed yesterday that "cheap WPA work" is beginning to catch up with the county.

By this, the engineer means that much of the work done by WPA gangs during the depression years is not standing up, chiefly due to the fact that the road bases were too light.

Despite the money spent on the WPA roads, Carscaden said, he can only draw one conclusion when he compares the results of the Federal financed roadwork with county work.

For example, the government spent $120,000 and the county $20,000 to build three miles of road in the Brice Hollow section during the depression. WPA labor used this sum to build three miles of road, Carscaden said.

Later, the county spent $12,000 to finish up the road, with the county engineer's force building an additional three miles.

Four Inch Base Faulty
Since that time, the county has spent $4,000 for surface repairs on the three mile stretch, built by WPA compared to $25 for the three-mile stretch built by the county, Carscaden said. And the WPA stretch of the Brice Hollow road is in bad shape right now, he added.

Carscaden said that much of the trouble with WPA roads is the fact that they were built on a loosely knitted four-inch stone base instead of the regulation eight-inch base. Consequently, the WPA work has had a tendency to crack up and constant repair work has been necessary with the engineer's staff hard put to it to keep caught up on their maintenance.

city also were delayed a few minutes, until rain abated.

Temperatures Drop
Temperatures in the city dropped to 77 degrees after the storm, although mercury had reached 90 degrees earlier in the day. Saturday mercury reached 96 degrees but dropped to 85 at 7 p. m., as rain fell in the Romney, W. Va. area, and the sky clouded in this vicinity. Saturday night about 11 p. m. a rainstorm over the city brought mercury down another five or six degrees, but early Sunday temperatures started climbing again.

The change from warm to cooler follows the weather forecast, as weathermen predicted last week that the heat wave would be broken Sunday. The prediction for today and tomorrow indicates rising temperatures, and Wednesday is expected to be very warm. Temperatures are expected to be a little above normal for July, during the next three or four days.

Villarreal's

Villarreal had been killed by the people.

The radio called for Tomas Monje Gutierrez, president of the district court, to deliver the provisional government to the revolutionists and appealed to the armed forces to isolate the Menzandea zone, focal point of resistance by Villarreal's forces.

The Sure and Loa regiments have joined the revolutionary movement, the broadcast continued, and have taken up positions on Avenue Aro.

Heavy fighting occurred at the capital's arsenal before the revolutionary forces, which included students, forced the backers of Villarreal to retire.

Large stores of arms and ammunition were concentrated at the university where a regiment was formed to put down any attempt at a counter-movement.

The revolutionists commenced a search for Victor Paz Estenssoro and other leaders of the Nationalist Revolutionary movement (MNR) who were reported to have escaped.

The MNR is the political organization which supported Villarreal. In addition to directing this party, Estenssoro had served as minister of economy and minister of finance.

Before the revolutionists consolidated their gains Villarreal — a virtual dictator — handed his resignation to Gen. Damaso Arenas, chief of staff, authoritative sources said. He also relinquished his office as commander-in-chief of the armed forces of Bolivia.

Political Prisoners Freed
In submitting his resignation the president said he took the step "with the desire of contributing to the peace and tranquility of the country."

The revolutionists fought for Villarreal as constitutional president.

JAMES E. ENGLE
James R. Engle, 61, a retired leather worker, died suddenly yesterday at 7:15 p. m. at his home, 27 North Liberty street. He had been in ill health for a number of years.

Born near Paw Paw, W. Va., Mr. Engle was a son of Mrs. Catherine F. Engle, Narrows Park, and the late William Engle. He came to Cumberland with his parents when he was a boy.

Besides his mother and his widow, Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Diehl Engle, Mr. Engle is survived by three children, Ernest Engle, Norfolk, Va.; Harry Engle, Centerville, Pa.; and Mrs. Edna Jenkins, Shade's Lane; three step-children, Melvin W. Carter, Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Mary Steinmetz, Bedford street, and Louis Carter, on sea duty with the navy; two brothers, Floyd and Charles Melvin Engle, both of Narrows Park; two sisters, Mrs. Beulah Steele, Walnut street, and Mrs. Octavia Crothers, Henderson avenue; and seven grandchildren.

The body has been taken to the Stein funeral home.

Three days to seize the government. They attacked the city hall and the traffic headquarters and after taking weapons from there they stormed the central jail and liberated political prisoners.

The police school and the streets of the central zone entering the Plaza Muelle where the government building is located then were captured in heavy fighting. The government building itself was entered.

Fighting still was going on against some centers of resistance. Radio Illimani, where the student's emergency committee is functioning, asked the students to organize the armed crowds to prevent looting.

Villarreal had served as president since December 20, 1943. He came to power after a group of army officers in co-operation with the National Revolutionary Movement deposed the government of Gen. Enrique Penaranda and set up a junta.

Later the junta was dissolved and replaced by a provisional government which Villarreal headed. In the election of June 2, 1944, the MNR gained a majority in the constituent assembly, and one of the assembly's first acts was to elect Villarreal as constitutional president.

Woman Declares Slain Sergeant Had Been Drinking

ELKTON, Md., July 21 (AP)—

State's Attorney Henry L. Constable disclosed today that questioning of Mrs. Frances Hitchens Barnett, at whose home Staff Sgt. Samuel Manoschian was shot and killed yesterday, revealed the soldier had been drinking heavily at the time of the shooting.

He said Mrs. Barnett, whose soldier-husband was killed in Germany on Christmas day, 1944, told him this story of the shooting:

Manoschian, of Worcester, Mass., had been calling on the petite, blonde widow for about a year, while stationed at Fort Dix, N. J. He came to the home of Mrs. Barnett and her father, Benjamin Hitchens, for supper yesterday.

He had been drinking heavily and had removed his shirt while he helped her with the dishes. After the dishes were washed, he took his wallet from his trousers pocket and scattered the money in it over the floor. He was talking loudly at this time, and the 50-year-old Hitchens, reading a book in the next room, asked him to be quiet.

"Go to hell," he responded. When Hitchens ordered him out of the house, Manoschian put his shirt on and said, "Give me my $200 and I'll leave."

Mrs. Barnett then handed him the wallet and the money, which she had picked up from the floor, telling him, "Here's your money, but I don't know whether there's $200 there."

In the argument that ensued, Manoschian threw a heavy, cut-glass dish at Hitchens, narrowly missing his head.

At this point Mrs. Barnett left the house, and Hitchens went for his gun. Mrs. Barnett heard no shot.

Her father joined her on the lawn a few seconds later and instructed her to "send for the law."

Sheriff Ralph W. Robinson said yesterday the soldier had struck the father over the head with a coffee-table.

The sheriff added that Manoschian's body showed bullet wounds from a .32 calibre pistol in the heart, spine and elbow. He died almost immediately.

Hitchens is being held without bail on a "felonious homicide" charge. A hearing has been set tentatively for Tuesday.

around. "Say, can I have shrimp cocktail and a steak along with it?" "Listen, this is your night," the host said. "You can have only one highball and one beer, because you're still hospital patients, but beyond that it's up to you."

The aleaks came, and the broiled lobster, and the cake and the ice cream and the coffee. Cigars and cigarettes were offered. A short frackled private from Indiana took a fat cigar and stuck it in his mouth.

"You look like Churchill," the paratrooper said. "If Churchill was a midjet."

"I see Churchill put some flowers on George Patton's grave the other day," the private said. "I was a stiffman for George and I still can't figure how I made it home."

The man from Tennessee, who had stretched signal wires across France, sat silent. The Ohioan drummed on the table with his hands and stared at the bouncing band.

After a minute, the host asked: "All set, boys? We've got tickets to see a broadcast, and then we go to a theater."

The waiters bowed and smiled, the soldiers walked slowly from the tavern garden to the army bus. The host squeezed his bulk into the last seat.

"Through the park, James," a soldier shouted. Swiftly the bus plunged through the park. People were sitting on benches or lying on the grass. They didn't turn their heads to watch the bus. A couple of girls waved, children halted and peered curiously.

The war was over. The war had been over for nearly a year. The middle-aged man in the last seat of the army bus fingered the silver numerals "52" which were pinned to the lapel of his light coat.

He was one of 1,500 New York men—doctors, lawyers, architects, musicians, executives, merchants—who had resolved to remember the wounded every week in the year. He had contributed $52 to the group, called simply "the 52 organization," and he had promised to give $52 every year.

The group was spreading. A chapter was forming in Chicago, another planned in Philadelphia, one taking shape in Los Angeles.

Led by a restaurant owner who was touched by the galaxy of a group of blind sailors in his cafe one night, a few men formed the association in February, 1945, quietly and without fanfare. Now the members entertain two groups of soldiers or sailors five nights a week, every week. The soldiers this evening brought the total to nearly 7,500 men, from every state in America.

5. What the president called a "cost plus" provision for profit of automobile and appliance dealers and an end to OPA's maximum average price regulation intended to force manufacturers to produce low price clothing.

6. Retroactivity of the act to Jan. 30, but with the proviso that "if act or trans" in occurring subsequent to June 30 and prior to the date of enactment of this act shall be deemed to be a violation of price controls.

7. A requirement that in establishing maximum prices applicable to wholesale or retail distributors on manufactured articles or agricultural products—OPA allow "in current cost of acquisition of an commodity, plus such average percentage discount or markup as was in effect March 31, 1946." Heavy Coal Trucks Damaging Several County Roadways

Heavily loaded coal trucks operating in strip-mine operations in this county are causing damage to many sections of county roadways, according to John H. Carscaden, county engineer.

Absolving the truck operators and mining companies of any blame, Carscaden declared the fault lies in the fact that the roads were not constructed to handle such heavy vehicles in the first place, and were designed as "farm to market" roads. They were never intended to accommodate heavily-laden coal trucks, the engineer declared.

Roads being ruined include the Ball Knob back of Mt. Savage, the Michaels road near Westport, the Miller road near Barton and the Butcher Run road, also in the vicinity of Barton.

WPA work criticized yesterday that "cheap WPA work" is beginning to catch up with the county.

By this, the engineer means that much of the work done by WPA gangs during the depression years is now standing up, chiefly due to the fact that the road bases were too light.

Despite the money spent on the WPA roads, Carscaden said, he can only draw one conclusion when he compares the results of the Federal financed roadwork with county work.

For example, the government spent $120,000 and the county $20,000 to build three miles of road in the Brice Hollow section during the depression. WPA labor used this sum to build three miles of road, Carscaden said.

Later, the county spent $12,000 to finish up the road, with the county engineer's force building an additional three miles.

Four Inch Base Faulty Since that time, the county has spent $4,000 for surface repairs on the three mile stretch built by WPA compared to $25 for the three-mile stretch built by the county, Carscaden said. And the WPA stretch of the Brice Hollow road is in bad shape right now, he added.

Carscaden said that much of the trouble with WPA roads is the fact that they were built on a loosely-knit four-inch stone base instead of the regulation eight-inch base. Consequently, the WPA work has had a tendency to crack up and constant repair work has been necessary with the engineer's staff hard put to it to keep caught up on their maintenance.

city also were delayed a few minutes, until rain abated.

Temperatures Drop Temperatures in the city dropped to 77 degrees after the storm, although mercury had reached 90 degrees earlier in the day. Saturday mercury reached 96 degrees, but dropped to 85 at 7 p. m., as rain fell in the Roman, W. Va., area, and the sky clouded in this vicinity. Saturday night about 11 p. m. a rainstorm over the city brought mercury down another five or six degrees, but early Sunday temperatures started climbing again.

The change from warm to cooler follows the weather forecast, as weathermen predicted last week that the heat wave would be broken Sunday. The prediction for today and tomorrow indicates rising temperatures, and Wednesday is expected to be very warm. Temperatures are expected to be a little above normal for July, during the next three or four days.

Villarreal had been killed by the people. The radio called for Tomas Monje Gutierrez, president of the district court, to deliver the provisional government to the revolutionists and appealed to the armed forces to isolate the Menzies zone, focal point of resistance by Villarreal's forces.

The Sucre and Los regiments have joined the revolutionary movement, the broadcast continued, and have taken up positions on Avenue Arce.

Heavy fighting occurred at the capital's arsenal before the revolutionary forces, which included students, forced the backers of Villarreal to retire.

Large stores of arms and ammunition were concentrated at the university where a regiment was formed to put down any attempt at a counter-movement.

The revolutionists commenced a search for Victor Paz Estenssoro and other leaders of the Nationalist Revolutionary movement (MNR) who were reported to have escaped.

The MNR is the political organization which supported Villarreal. In addition to directing this party, Estenssoro had served as minister of economy and minister of finance.

Before the revolutionists consolidated their gains Villarreal—on a virtual dictator—handed his resignation to Gen. Damaso Arenas, chief of staff, authoritative sources said. He also relinquished his office as commander-in-chief of the armed forces of Bolivia.

Political Prisoners Freed In submitting his resignation the president said he took the step "with the desire of contributing to the peace and tranquility of the country."

three days to seize the government. They attacked the city hall and the traffic headquarters and after taking weapons from there they stormed the central jail and liberated political prisoners.

The police school and the streets of the central zone entering the Plaza Murillo where the government building is located then were captured in heavy fighting. The government building itself was entered.

Fighting still was going on against some centers of resistance. Radio Illimani, where the student's emergency committee is functioning, asked the students to organize the armed crowds to prevent looting.

Villarreal had served as president since December 20, 1942. He came to power after a group of army officers in co-operation with the National Revolutionary Movement deposed the government of Gen. Enrique Penaranda and set up a junta.

Later the junta was dissolved and replaced by a provisional government which Villarreal headed. In the election of June 2, 1944, the MNR gained a majority in the constituent assembly, and one of the assembly's first acts was to elect Villarreal as constitutional president.

Capt. Clarence Owens Is Home On Leave

After nearly four years overseas with the army, Capt. Clarence W. Owens, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Owens, 112 Pennsylvania avenue, is home on a 45-day leave from the European theater, where he is in charge of phases of transportation and redeployment.

Prior to his enlistment in October, 1941, Capt. Owens was employed by the American Bridge Company, Ambridge, Pa. He went overseas in September, 1942, and served with an anti-aircraft battalion until last September. After his leave he will return to the ETO, with headquarters either in London or Paris.

In the argument that ensued, Manoschian threw a heavy, cut-glass dish at Hitchens, narrowly missing his head.

At this point Mrs. Barnett left the house, and Hitchens went for his gun. Mrs. Barnett heard no shot.

Her father joined her on the lawn a few seconds later and instructed her to "send for the law."

Sheriff Ralph W. Robinson said yesterday the soldier had struck the father over the head with a coffee-table.

The sheriff added that Manoschian's body showed bullet wounds from a .32 calibre pistol in the heart, spine and elbow. He died almost immediately.

Hitchens is being held without bail on a "felonious homicide" charge. A hearing has been set tentatively for Tuesday.

Phillips decided that he would either have to give up the hobby or else enlarge on it and give up the most business. A few months later a son, Frank, was running the butcher shop and Mr. Phillips was busy erecting additional green houses at the Watercliff home.

Expects To Keep Busy With years of hard work and profound interest in the business John Phillips green house became well known up and down George's creek and flowers were arranged there for many outstanding events in Western Maryland. In the early 1920's the "History of Allegany County" was published, and Mr. Phillips found that he was included among the prominent men of the county as listed in the book. But the last sentence of the biographical sketch stated that he was retiring. "That sure wasn't my statement," he said yesterday. "I've been laughing about it ever since."

For the next month or two the oenogranian is going to be pretty busy. He has already released all control of the green house to his grandson, Arthur, who recently returned from service, and now he is devoting his time to the trying task of getting material to improve many of the properties he owns throughout the county. "I want to get them all fixed up and rented, before the hunting season begins," he explained.

Then his eyes lighted up and he talked easily. He hasn't a favorite collection of guns and rifles but Mr. Phillips has been hunting deer and other game for the past 25 years, and that hobby will never get too big for him. "I missed one season," he said, "that was in 1938, the year my wife died, and I just didn't have the desire to go." Does he get a deer every season? "No, I don't, nor does any body else get one every year," and his eyes indicated, "if they claim they do, they're . . . you know what."

But Mr. Phillips has a reputation with his guns, he has been interested in them a great many more than 25 years. His father was regarded one of the best marksmen in Lonaconing, and the son followed well. During his early manhood he held numerous rod and gun clubs offices in the George's creek section and yesterday he exhibited a small bull's eye with the center cut completely out, by four well placed shots. "I did that a few years ago," he said, "I don't think my aim would be quite so good now."

Is Still A Good Shot However, he isn't worried about missing any deer that may cross his path this fall. In fact, he is going to be all set, for already he is beginning to get business out of the way for the deer season. And he will be found in nearby deer country tracking and waiting along with the best.

There is another interest that he displays proudly in the rear of his green houses . . . a big maple tree. When he moved the business from Watercliff to the present Main street location, there was a young sapling in the rear of the yard. "It's a special kind of maple," he said as he reached for a nearby piece of rope and began wrapping it around the trunk of the tree about a foot from the ground. Then he marked the rope and held it up. "It's about nine feet in circumference now," he exclaimed.

So at 88 Mr. Phillips is selling his green houses and the chrysanthemums that he loves so well to his grandson, who holds degrees in agriculture and horticulture from the University of Maryland. Yesterday his grandson had just one statement to make, "I hope I can do as well as grandfather has done."

Minds Own Business Politically Mr. Phillips is, and always has been, a Republican. But he was never very active in politics. "I vote at election time, and then tend to my own business," he said yesterday. "I try to keep my opinions to myself and want the next man to keep his to himself." Even on current subjects this is true of Mr. Phillips, for he would make no statements about the administration, OPA or what he thought of the present term of Congress.

From now on, Mr. Phillips is going to pay strict attention to renting and caring for his properties—that is until deer season opens.

Nobody could blame one for not wanting to lie in the kind of beds some persons make.

Woman Declares Slain Sergeant Had Been Drinking

ELKTON, Md., July 21 (AP)—State's Attorney Henry L. Constable disclosed today that questioning of Mrs. Frances Hitchens Barnett, at whose home Staff Sgt. Samuel Manoschian was shot and killed yesterday, revealed the soldier had been drinking heavily at the time of the shooting.

He said Mrs. Barnett, whose soldier-husband was killed in Germany on Christmas day, 1944, told him this story of the shooting:

Manoschian, of Worcester, Mass., had been calling on the petite, blonde widow for about a year, while stationed at Fort Dix, N. J. He came to the home of Mrs. Barnett and her father, Benjamin Hitchens, for supper yesterday.

He had been drinking heavily and had removed his shirt while he helped her with the dishes. After the dishes were washed, he took his wallet from his trousers pocket and scattered the money in it over the floor. He was talking loudly at this time, and the 50-year-old Hitchens, reading a book in the next room, asked him to be quiet.

"Go to hell," he responded. When Hitchens ordered him out of the house, Manoschian put his shirt on and said, "Give me my $200 and I'll leave."

Mrs. Barnett then handed him the wallet and the money, which she had picked up from the floor, telling him, "Here's your money, but I don't know whether there's $200 there."

In the argument that ensued, Manoschian threw a heavy, cut-glass dish at Hitchens, narrowly missing his head.

At this point Mrs. Barnett left the house, and Hitchens went for his gun. Mrs. Barnett heard no shot.

Her father joined her on the lawn a few seconds later and instructed her to "send for the law."

Sheriff Ralph W. Robinson said yesterday the soldier had struck the father over the head with a coffee-table.

The sheriff added that Manoschian's body showed bullet wounds from a .32 calibre pistol in the heart, spine and elbow. He died almost immediately.

around. "Say, can I have shrimp cocktail and a steak along with it?" "Listen, this is your night," the host said. "You can have only one highball and one beer, because you're still hospital patients, but beyond that it's up to you."

The steaks came, and the broiled lobster, and the cake and the ice cream, and the coffee. Cigars and cigarettes were offered. A short, freckled private from Indiana took a fat cigar and stuck it in his mouth.

"You look like Churchill," the paratrooper said. "If Churchill was a midjet."

"I see Churchill put some flowers on George Patton's grave the other day," the private said. "I was a rifleman for George and I still can't figure how I made it home."

The man from Tennessee, who had stretched signal wires across France, sat silent. The Ohioan drummed on the table with his hands and stared at the bouncing band.

After a minute, the host asked: "All set, boys? We've got tickets to see a broadcast, and then we go to a theater."

The waiters bowed and smiled. The soldiers walked slowly from the tavern garden to the army bus. The host squeezed his bulk into the last seat.

"Through the park, James," a soldier shouted. Swiftly the bus plunged through the park. People were sitting on benches or lying on the grass. They didn't turn their heads to watch the bus. A couple of girls waved, children halted and peered curiously.

The war was over. The war had been over for nearly a year. The middle-aged men in the last seat of the army bus fingered the silver numerals "52" which were pinned to the lapel of his light coat.

He was one of 1,500 New York men—doctors, lawyers, architects, musicians, executives, merchants—who had resolved to remember the wounded every week in the year. He had contributed $52 to the group, called simply "the 52 organization," and he had promised to give $52 every year.

The group was spreading. A chapter was forming in Chicago, another planned in Philadelphia, one taking shape in Los Angeles.

Led by a restaurant owner who was touched by the galaxy of a group of blind sailors in his cafe one night, a few men formed the association in February, 1945, quietly and without fanfare. Now the members entertain two groups of soldiers or sailors five nights a week.

The soldiers this evening brought the total to nearly 7,500 men, from every state in America.

"Cost Plus" Provision

5. What the president called a "cost plus" provision for profit of automobile and appliance dealers and an end to OPA's maximum average price regulation intended to force manufacturers to produce low price clothing.

6. Retroactivity of the act to June 30, but with the proviso that "no act or transaction occurring subsequent to June 30 and prior to the date of enactment of this act shall be deemed to be a violation" of price controls.

7. A requirement that in establishing maximum prices applicable to wholesale or retail distributors on manufactured articles or agricultural products—OPA allow "in current cost of acquisition of an commodity, plus such average percentage discount or markup as was in effect March 31, 1946." This would stop a large portion of OPA "cost absorption" program whereby distributors are required to accept lower profits so that no all of high manufacturing costs is passed on to the consumer.

Congress Moves For Perpetual Calendar

Congress has started to do something about one of our oldest and most important standards: the calendar. A bill was introduced whereby the United States would adopt The World Calendar, effective in 1950. At last there is a real possibility of having a calendar which is perpetual and unchanging, stabilizes holidays and balances the quarters of the year so they are equal.

For over a hundred years, ever since 1824 when an Italian priest named Mastriani devised a perpetual calendar, astronomers, mathematicians and other scientists have been at work studying, refining and testing it. It was first used as a guide by commercial, industrial, labor, historians, educators, lawyers and others.

From 1921 to 1937 the League of Nations considered over 500 proposed calendars. Finally the League conducted a referendum to member and non-member nations with the result that 14 nations endorsed it. The World Calendar, and some others endorsed it with reservations. The endorsing states included Norway, Greece, Spain, Hungary and Estonia in Europe, Chile, Peru, Brazil, Uruguay, Panama and Mexico in Latin America, Turkey and Afghanistan in the Near East, and China in the Far East.

While The World Calendar is wholly civil and secular, it is significant that these Roman Catholic, Protestant, Mohammedan, Buddhist and Confucian nations endorsed it.

The previous calendars used by the world, apart from almost innumerable religious calendars, have been those devised by the Egyptians in 4236 B. C., the first sun seasonal calendar, by Julius Caesar, known as the Julian, instituted 45 B. C., that of the Emperor Augustus, dated 8 B. C., the Emperor Constantine's, of 321 A. D., and the revision by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582, which was adopted by England until 1752, Japan in 1873, China 1912, the Soviet 1918, Greece 1923 and Turkey 1927.

The World Calendar retains the familiar 12 months. In its arrangement it recognizes the equal quarters of the year, corresponding approximately to the seasons, and it provides a uniform pattern of quarters with months of 31-30-30 days. Each quarter thus has 91 days and 13 weeks or 3 months. Each month has 28 weeks; plus Sunday. Holidays are fixed as to day and date. This takes care of 364 days.

An extra day, the 365th, the Year-End Day, is a World Holiday, dedicated to international friendship and peace, denominated W or 31 December. In leap years another extra day, the 366th, is at the end of June, in midyear. In this manner the calendar is balanced and stabilized. A suggestion has been made that the Year-End World Holiday be named United Nations Day.

The United States has long been a pioneer and leader of the world in establishing standards for production and improving all sorts of standards. Too long has improvement of the time-table of our lives been deferred. It is to be hoped that Congress will act favorably in regard to The World Calendar.

Former U. S. ambassador to Russia says a few atomic bombs dropped on the land of the Muscovites would straighten it out, and there can be no question that a straightening out treatment is greatly needed.

Still Champion Of A Lost Cause

No man in America has had greater or more sustained faith in lighter-than-air craft for purposes both of war and peace than Rear Admiral Charles E. Rosendahl, who has retired at Lakehurst, N. J., as chief of naval airship training and experimentation. In concluding his career of 36 years in the Navy, he has seen heavier-than-air craft play a major part in the winning of the war, both in Europe and in the Pacific. He has also seen, with the oncoming of war and the destruction of industrial Germany, world disappearance of dirigibles as great passenger and cargo carriers and their replacement by speedier, and presumably safer, air lines of the other type.

So to many upon his retirement Admiral Rosendahl must appear as the champion of an already lost cause. But, though the tremendous bombing of the war was done by planes, he can point to the successful defense by blimps in coastal waters, and he still envisions the big airship as a carrier of raiding planes. He has not for a moment ceased to be an enthusiast about the greater passenger and cargo carrying possibilities of dirigibles, of which he had a rare experience. Dr. Hugo Eckener's guest aboard the Graf Zeppelin in its tour of the world in 1929. Seven years later he wrote that the Zeppelin, flying between Germany and Brazil, had made 132 transoceanic air trips, which made it a "flying bus" with a "fair weather vessel." Compared with it he thought airplanes "flying gasoline tanks" rather than "flying cargoes."

When, the Shenandoah, then the world's greatest lighter-than-air craft, broke in two in a storm in Ohio in 1935, the then Lieutenant Rosendahl was navigator. Later he commanded the Akron, the first rigid, and the Akron, the first rigid, sank into the sea off Barnegat Light, and had previously commanded the German-built Los Angeles for six years. As Captain Rosendahl, he was commander at Lakehurst when the Hindenberg exploded in 1937 at her mooring there. Despite these disasters, the faith of Admiral Rosendahl is undimmed as to the transport future of dirigibles in war and peace. But to advocates of the heavier-than-air type, his voice is as a voice crying in the wilderness.

Whitney of the trainmen repeats he is out to defeat Truman. That man has a one-track mind.

Bumper Corn Crop; Bumper Meat Supply

Most significant factor in the record corn crop predicted for the United States is the possibility that meat supplies next year will be better than expected.

Under the scarce feed situation, brought about by heavy shipments of grain to Europe, meat animals have not been fed to normal weights. This was encouraged by controlled pricing which penalized the feeder who sought heavy weights. Hundreds of millions of pounds of meat that the country otherwise would have had were sacrificed through the program of short feeding.

Corn still has the hazard of August to go through. If it makes the grade and yields as abundantly as forecast, full feeding of livestock can be restored much sooner than had been anticipated. This is all the more likely in view of the certainty that shipments of food to Europe can not be continued forever.

The danger is that slaughter of grass cattle will be so heavy in the next few weeks that there will not be enough left to fill the feedlots next winter. If that happens the shortage will be acute next year. But it appears now that there will be enough feed to restore normal feeding programs after a few months.

Some manufacturers say the shortage of material for pockets is holding up suit manufacture. Maybe, after paying for a suit, we won't need the pockets.

More Atomic Evils To Confront Us

The atomic age, besides scaring the human race half out of its wits, has sown a crop of corny catchwords which in itself is a dreadfully wearisome, though minor, menace.

First it was the puns on atom and atomic, and the pictures of young women in bathing suits labeled "An-atomic Blonde." Then there were the business establishments with new nuclear names—the Atomic Sportswear, Atomic Excursion, Atomic This-and-That companies.

And now Operation Crossroads has started a new fad. To some caption writers and head writers of our noble profession, the preface Operation is apparently considered the final word in cleverness. The other day, for instance, we saw a picture of some girls starting off to help somebody pick his berry crop. The caption, of course, was "Operation Raspberry."

Now this thing has gone far enough. We keep hoping that the fad will wear itself out. But perhaps the safe thing would be for Mr. Baruch to attach some sort of a prohibitive rider onto his plan for safe disposition of the atom. That much of an abridgement of press freedom we'll be happy to support.

What ever happened to Chet Bowles? Is he currently on or off the payroll?

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

There are certain repeat experiences that we delight in looking forward to—especially because the same experience never quite duplicates itself. Weekends—my lovely small island summer home in Nova Scotia—is like that. This is the sixteenth summer I have spent here, yet each one is different.

There is always something new to do. This year I had built some added porches, in the rustic style, so as to blend with the natural surroundings. I got my tools together and started mending and repairing things hardly before I had unpacked my luggage. It's cool here—nights usually touch 50 degrees, but the days are warm—almost a perfect summer climate. Cool, rich air at night, with the odor of the pines, and the smell of the forest all day long.

My pet red squirrels were so wild to see me back that they jumped all over me. I brought a big bag of peanuts for them, which they seemed to scent, and I had to leave my place on the veranda because it was too many peanuts and no resting, and a continuous begging for more and more. Greedy little creatures!

The glorious pines never looked so fresh and green, and a kind neighbor had already set out my favorite bed of pansies, which smiled at me from a variety of colored faces. I walked for miles, it seemed, over the sprang, mossy paths about the island, and seemed to tire not at all, as one is so apt to on busy, noisy city streets. Each day here is medicine to my soul. Here are quiet, peace, and beauty.

My little library of special books are here, my faithful typewriter, and all about me—a day and night, God's almost silent, mellow music. For there are sounds in nature that beggar description—the wind, the sway of the pines, the call of birds, and the rustling of the hard wood. Here, too, are clouds and sunsets that carry memories to the open fire in the lodge—remembered love, friendly talk, and sadness because of vanished hands and hearts. But joy always springs to life anew with the budding morn.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "The Dark Curtain"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Sen. Barkley Threatens to resign over OPA; Larry Fly, Ex-News Dealer, Puts Across Big Lobbying Deals; Farm Leaders Try to Covert Truman.

By DREW FEARSON

WASHINGTON, July 21—Patient Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky hasn't blown off steam since he stamped the Senate against FDR's veto of the last war tax bill. But at a luncheon the other day he indicated to friends that the pot again was beginning to boil.

In fact, Barkley stated categorically that he would resign if President Truman vetoed the present OPA bill.

He said he was tired of living on a "diet" and that the present OPA bill was the best he could get out of the Senate, and if the President wouldn't accept it, he would resign as majority leader.

The serious and protracted illness of the Senator's wife and the recent disclosure that his son was employed by the war office has profited him increased Barkley's already heavy burden. Senate friends hope, however, that either the price-control problem will be ironed out or that Barkley will reconsider.

The Barkley conversation took place just prior to a luncheon commemorating the 200th anniversary of Princeton University, attended by Senators Alexander Smith, of New Jersey and Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania, both Princeton men. Admiral Ernie King (Annapolis) and Senator Barkley (Emory College, Ga.) though not Princeton grads, were also present.

Ex-FCChairman Larry Fly was once a stickler for many things. Now he is a lobbyist for several opposite things. When he was head of the Federal Communications Commission he barred the "Pot of Gold" program from the air because it was a lottery. Now he is attorney for the "Pot of Gold."

This week, Fly has turned another unique somersault. As FCCChairman, he was strong against granting radio licenses to newspapers. He did not believe in monopolies of opinion. Also Fly's best friend for twelve long years happened to be Franklin Roosevelt. The late President elevated him from a lowly lawyer to various positions of trust and power.

This week, however, Fly is acting as attorney for John Ewing, Louisiana newspaper and radio operator, who was one of FDR's bitterest enemies in the South. Ewing helped lead the move to steal Roosevelt's election in the electoral college. He owns the Shreveport Times, the Monroe, La. Morning World and the Monroe News-Star, station KTBS in Hot Springs, Ark., and lists himself as owning stations KTBS and KWKH in Shreveport.

The latter of these is one of the most powerful in the country—50,000 watts. Despite this, Ewing is now applying for another 50,000-watt station in New Orleans, and is boasting that with the influence of Larry Fly behind him he will get it. It will be interesting to see if FCC members bow before their former chairman.

Note—Ewing has retained Clark Salmun, a New Orleans New Dealer, as a front.

It has been a long time since the face of 11-year-old Sigrid Stengel, German war refugee, has lit up as it did when she visited the White House the other day.

You wouldn't have thought that such a pretty and poised little girl could have known the horrors of war. She wore a blue cotton dress and looked like any little American girl as she pinned a red feather on President Truman symbolizing the start of the Community Chest Drive.

It has been five years since Sigrid saw her Jewish parents taken away by S.S. men in southern Germany. Later her older sister also "disappeared." Now Sigrid is living with a cousin in Washington.

Three other children who have been aided by the Community Chest accompanied Miss Beatrice Hodgson, a Chest official, as Sigrid pinned the red feather on the President.

Mr. Truman thanked her, then reached up as if to remove the feather.

"Don't you want to wear it?" asked Miss Hodgson.

"Oh, yes," replied Truman. "I was thinking."

Miss Hodgson had the same thought. "Sigrid," she asked, "wouldn't you like to have that feather as a souvenir?"

"Yes, I'd love it."

"All right, Sigrid," said the President, "you can have it. But since you pinned the feather on me, you'll have to unpin it."

Sigrid lost no time complying. When she left the White House, she was carrying the feather like a trophy, and if her thoughts drifted back to the bitter past, you couldn't tell it from her million-dollar smile.

Three farm officials, Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, together with president, Quentin Reynolds and John Davis of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, came away from a White House conference with a 50-50 score the other day.

Truman agreed with them that one agricultural expert should be among the three members of the Economic Council to be set up under the Full Employment Act. But he disagreed when Grange boss Goss tried to convert him on the OPA.

"I don't want you to think I'm slipping, Mr. President," grinned the farm leader as the meeting was about to break up. "Every time we meet, we discuss a certain subject. So if I came here today and didn't mention it, you'd probably think something was wrong."

"Ah—the OPA," guessed Truman immediately. "What have you got on your mind?"

Goss replied that he still had hopes of converting the President to the idea that maximum production could only be achieved by relaxing price controls.

"My organization wants to see OPA continued," said the Grange leader, "but with limitations that will enable the farmer to produce more."

Goss contended that the shortage of fertilizer was attributable to price ceilings; also that much of the last hay crop was lost because of the delay in granting baling wire manufacturers a price boost to encourage wire production.

Truman replied that he had heard the same arguments many times before and that he realized OPA's management had not been "100 per cent perfect." However, he said he had not changed his position.

one idea from the views set forth in his veto message on the first OPA extension bill sent him by Congress.

"We must have down-the-line price controls," concluded the President. "It is wrong to make specific exemptions in the law favoring certain producers, as some factions in Congress are attempting to do."

West Virginia's able Senator Harley Kilgore recently held an emergency conference with President Truman on a subject close to everyone's stomach—meat. In West Virginia, however, it is especially serious because the meat shortage has decreased coal miner efficiency.

Senator Kilgore who has been working on the problem for some time, even acted as a purchasing agent, and dug up two carloads of canned salmon on the West Coast for sale to the miners.

Kilgore told President Truman that he had already taken up the problem with Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson and Reconversion Director John Steelman, but neither had any solution. The groceries in the coal areas simply have not been able to get meat, flour, corn meal and dairy products for several months, with the shortage so acute that miners are now talking about a hunger strike.

"But at the same time," Kilgore

If your husband tells you he goes to lodge meetings on Friday night, don't believe him. You'll probably find him in a ring-side seat at the local fight arena. These tough and brings home didn't come from the ropes. . . . But they kept throwing me back into the ring.

The Friday night fights are fast becoming an American habit, with even women and children to be seen amongst the cheering crowds. I understand the women aren't very much impressed, though. They consider the Friday night fights as merely preliminaries. . . . Their big fight comes off Saturday night when the old man brings home the pay check.

Boxing is a good, clean American sport and the pugilists of today are truly gentlemen. . . . In fact, they won't be seen in the ring without their gloves.

I've always been an avid follower of the manly art and in my youth was quite a fighter, myself. I was full of energy in those days and known for my ability to jump over the ropes. . . . But they kept throwing me back into the ring.

I was really quite popular in my day and you should've heard my fans whistle when I stepped into the ring. . . . I was the only fighter in the business who wore pink trunks. My manager finally persuaded me to give up the ring and become a comedian. He figured as long as I was "punchy" . . . I might as well get paid for it.

told the President, "hotels and restaurants through West Virginia have been able to buy reasonable amounts of meat."

Major reason for the miner food shortage, he explained, is that before the war, miner stores were accustomed to buying direct from the big meat packers rather than through wholesalers. The big packers are in short supply, however, and have had to take care of their wholesaler customers first. In one case, Kilgore told Truman, he found a meat supplier had only five carcasses to supply the meat needs of miners in four counties for a whole week.

Kilgore also pointed out that each miner now has a larger family to feed than before the war.

The average age of the miner has risen during the war years from about 27 to about 47," he told the President. "The result is not only that the miner must be assured of the food necessary to do his tough job but he must also have enough food for his family."

"The miners know, Harry, that you took over the mines not long ago," Kilgore reminded Truman, "and they'd like to know why you couldn't take over the farms and food processing plants to insure the distribution of food where it is needed."

The President dodged this question.

tion, but assured Kilgore steps will be taken to channel food to the coal fields. He said he would confer with Secretary Anderson about the possibility of channeling food to the West Virginia miners.

Congress Moves For Perpetual Calendar

Congress has started to do something about one of our oldest problems: the calendar. A bill was introduced whereby the United States would adopt The World Calendar, effective in 1950. At last there is a real possibility of having a calendar which is perpetual and unchanging, stabilizes holidays and balances the quarters of the year so they are equidistant.

For over a hundred years, ever since 1834 when an Italian priest named Mastrodini devised a perpetual calendar, astronomers, mathematicians and other scientists have been at work studying, refining and testing it to meet our need as urged by commerce, industry, labor, historians, educators, lawyers and others.

From 1921 to 1937 the League of Nations considered over 500 proposed calendars. Finally the League adopted a referendum to members and non-member nations with the result that 14 nations endorsed The World Calendar, and some others endorsed it with reservations. The endorsing states included Norway, Greece, Spain, Hungary and Estonia in Europe, Chile, Peru, Brazil, Uruguay, Panama and Mexico in Latin America, Turkey and Afghanistan in the Near East, and China in the Far East.

While The World Calendar is wholly civil and secular, it is significant that these Roman Catholic, Protestant, Mohammedan, Buddhist and Confucian nations endorsed it.

The previous calendars used by the world, apart from almost innumerable religious calendars, have been those devised by the Egyptians in 4238 B. C., the first sun seasonal calendar, by Julius Caesar, known as the Julian, instituted 45 B. C., that of the Emperor Augustus, dated 8 B. C., the Emperor Constantine's, of 321 A. D., and the revision by Pope Gregory XIII of 1582, which was not accepted by England until 1752, Japan 1873, China 1912, the Soviet 1918, Greece 1923 and Turkey 1927.

The World Calendar retains the familiar 12 months. In its arrangement the equinoxes and the equinoxes of the year, corresponding approximately to the seasons, and it provides a uniform pattern for all quarters with months of 31-30-30 days. Each quarter thus has 91 days and 13 weeks or 3 months. Each month has 28 weeks: plus Sunday. Holidays are fixed as to date and date. This takes care of 364 days.

An extra day, the 365th, the Year-End Day, is a World Holiday dedicated to international friendship and peace, denominated W or 31 December. In leap years another extra day, the 366th, is at the end of June, in midyear. In this manner the calendar is balanced and stabilized. A suggestion has been made that the Year-End World Holiday be named United Nations Day.

The United States has long been a pioneer and leader of the world in establishing standards for production and improving all sorts of standards. Too long has improvement of the time-table of our lives been deferred. It is to be hoped that Congress will act favorably in regard to The World Calendar.

Former U. S. ambassador to Russia says a few atomic bombs dropped on the land of the Muscovites would straighten it out, and there can be no question that a straightening out treatment is greatly needed.

Still Champion

Of A Lost Cause

No man in America has had greater or more sustained faith in lighter-than-air craft for purposes both of war and peace than Rear Admiral Charles E. Rosendahl, who has retired at Lakehurst, N. J., chief of naval airship training and experimentation. In concluding his career of 36 years in the Navy, he has seen heavier-than-air craft play a major part in the winning of the war both in Europe and in the Pacific. He has also seen, with the coming of war and the destruction of industrial Germany, world disappearance of dirigibles as great passenger and cargo carriers and their replacement by speedier, and presumably safer, air lines of the type.

So to many upon his retirement Admiral Rosendahl must appear as the champion of an already lost cause. But, though the tremendous bombing of the war was done by planes, he can point to the successful defense by blimps in coastal waters, and he still envisages the big airship as a carrier of raiding planes. He has not for a moment ceased to be an enthusiast about the greater passenger and cargo carrying possibilities of dirigibles, of which he had a rare experience as Dr. Hugo Eckener's guest aboard the Graf Zeppelin in its tour of the world in 1929. Seven years later he wrote that the Zeppelin, flying between Germany and Brazil, had made 132 transoceanic air trips, which made it anything but a "fair weather vessel." Compared with it he thought airplanes "flying gasoline tanks" rather than "flying caskets."

When, then, the Hindenburg, then the world's greatest lighter-than-air craft, broke in two in a storm in Ohio in 1937, the then Lieutenant Rosendahl was navigator. Later he commanded the Akron before she sank into the sea off Barnegat Light, and had previously commanded the German-built Los Angeles for six years. As Captain Rosendahl, he was commander at Lakehurst when the Hindenburg exploded in 1937 at her pylon there. Despite these disasters, the faith of Admiral Rosendahl is undimmed as to the transport future of dirigibles in war and peace. But to advocates of the heavier-than-air type, his voice is as a voice crying in the wilderness.

Whitney of the trainmen repeats he is out to defeat Truman. That man has a one-track mind.

Bumper Corn Crop; Bumper Meat Supply

Most significant factor in the bumper corn crop predicted for the United States is the possibility that meat supplies next year will be better than expected.

Under the scarce feed situation, brought about by heavy shipments of grain to Europe, meat animals have not been fed to normal weights. This was encouraged by controlled rationing which penalized the feeder who sought heavy weights. Hundreds of millions of pounds of meat that the country otherwise would have had were sacrificed through the program of short feeding.

Corn still has the hazard of August to go through. If it makes the grade and yields as abundantly as forecast, full feeding of livestock can be restored much sooner than had been anticipated. This is all the more likely in view of the certainty that shipments of food to Europe can not be continued forever.

The danger is that slaughter of grain cattle will be so heavy in the next few weeks that there will not be enough left to fill the feedlots next winter. If that happens the shortage will be acute next year. But it appears now that there will be enough feed to restore normal feeding programs after a few months.

Some manufacturers say the shortage of material for pockets is holding up suit manufacture. Maybe, after paying for a suit, we won't need the pockets.

More Atomic Evils To Confront Us

The atomic age, besides scaring the human race half out of its wits, has sown a crop of corny catchwords which in itself is a dreadfully wearisome, though minor, menace.

First it was the puns on atom and atomic, and the pictures of young women in bathing suits labeled "An-atomic Blonde." Then there were the business establishments with new nuclear names—the Atomic Sportswear, Atomic Terminator, Atomic This-and-That companies.

And now Operation Crossroads has started a new fad. To some caption writers and head writers of our noble profession, the phrase Operation is apparently considered the final word in cleverness. The other day, for instance, we saw a picture of some girls starting off to help somebody pick his berry crop. The caption, of course, was "Operation Raspberry."

Now this thing has gone far enough. We keep hoping that the fad will wear itself out. But perhaps the safe thing would be for Mr. Baruch to attach some sort of a prohibitive rider onto his plan for safe disposition of the atom. That much of an abridgement of press freedom will be happy to support.

What ever happened to Chief Bowler? Is he currently on or off the payroll?

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

There are certain repeat experiences which we delight in looking forward to—especially because the same experience never quite duplicates itself. Wekawa—a my lovely small island summer home in Nova Scotia—is like that. This is the sixteenth summer I have spent here, yet each one is different.

There is always something new to do. This year I had built some added porches, in the rustic style, so as to blend with the natural surroundings. I got my tools together and started mending and repairing things hardly before I had unpacked my luggage. It's cool here—nights usually touch 50 degrees, but the days are warm—almost a perfect summer climate. Cool, rich air at night, with the odor of the pines, and the smell of the forest all day long.

My pet red squirrel was so wild to see me back that they jumped all over me. I brought a big bag of peanuts for them, which they seemed to scent, and I had to leave my place on the verandah because it was too many peanuts and no reading, and a continuous begging for more and more. Greedy little creatures!

The glorious pines never looked so fresh and green, and a kind neighbor had already set out my favorite bed of pansies, which smiled at me from a variety of colored faces. I walked for miles, it seemed, over the springy, mossy paths about the island, and seemed to tire not at all, as one is so apt to on busy, noisy city streets. Each day is in medicine to my soul. Here are quiet, peace and beauty.

My little library of special books are here, my faithful typewriter, and all about me—day and night, God's almost silent mellow music—for there are sounds in nature that beggar description—the wind, the sway of the pines, the call of birds, and the rustling of the hard wood. Here, too, are clouds and sunsets that carry memories to the open fire in the lodge—remembered love, friendly talk, and sadness because of vanished hands and hearts. But joy always springs to life anew with the budding morn.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "The Dark Curtain"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Sen. Barkley Threatens to resign Over OPA; Larry Fly, Ex-New Dealer, Puts Across Big Lobbying Deals; Farm Leaders Try to Covert Truman.

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Patient Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky hasn't blown off steam since he stampeded the Senate against FDR's veto of the last war tax bill. But at a luncheon the other day he indicated to friends that the pot again was beginning to boil.

In fact, Barkley stated categorically that he would resign if President Truman vetoed the present OPA bill.

He said he was tired of living on a treadmill, that the present OPA bill was the best he could get out of the Senate, and if the President wouldn't accept it, he would resign as majority leader.

The serious and protracted illness of the Senator's wife and the recent disclosure that his son was employed by the Erie Basin war profiteers have increased Barkley's already heavy burden. Senate friends hope, however, that either the price-control problem will be ironed out or that Barkley will reconsider.

The Barkley conversation took place just prior to a luncheon commemorating the 200th anniversary of Princeton University, attended by Senators Alexander Smith of New Jersey and Joe Guiffey of Pennsylvania, both Princeton men. Admiral Ernie King (Annapolis) and Senator Barkley (Emory College, Ga.) though not Princeton grads, were also present.

Ex-PC chairman Larry Fly was once a stickler for many things. Now he is a lobbyist for several opposite things. When he was head of the Federal Communications Commission he barred the "Pot of Gold" program from the air because it was a lottery. Now he is attorney for the "Pot of Gold."

This week, Fly has turned another unique somersault. As FCC chairman, he was strong against granting radio licenses to monopolies of opinion. Also Fly's best friend for twelve long years happened to be Franklin Roosevelt. The late President elevated him from a lowly lawyer to various positions of trust and power.

This week, however, Fly is acting as attorney for John Ewing, Louisiana newspaper and radio operator, who was one of FDR's bitterest enemies in the South. Ewing helped lead the move to steal Roosevelt's electors in the electoral college. He owns the Shreveport Times, the Monroe, La., Morning World and the Monroe News-Star, station KTHS in Hot Springs, Ark., and lists himself as owning stations KTBS and KWKH in Shreveport.

The latter of these is one of the most powerful in the country, with 50,000 watts. Despite this, Ewing is now applying for another 50,000-watt station in New Orleans, and is boasting that with the influential Larry Fly behind him he will get it. It will be interesting to see if FCC members bow before their former chairman.

Note—Ewing has retained Clark Salzman, a New Orleans New Dealer, as a front.

It has been a long time since the face of 11-year-old Sigrid Stengel, German war refugee, has lit up as it did when she visited the White House the other day.

You wouldn't have thought that such a pretty and poised little girl could have known the horrors of war. She wore a blue cotton dress and looked like any little American girl as she pinned a red feather on President Truman symbolizing the start of the Community Chest Drive.

It has been five years since Sigrid saw her Jewish parents taken away by S.S. men in southern Germany. Later her older sister also "disappeared." Now Sigrid is living with a cousin in Washington.

Three other children who have been aided by the Community Chest accompanied Miss Beatrice Hodgson, a Chest official, as Sigrid pinned the red feather on the President.

Mr. Truman thanked her, then reached up as if to remove the feather.

"Don't you want to wear it?" asked Miss Hodgson.

"Oh, yes," replied Truman. "I was thinking—"

Miss Hodgson had the same thought. "Sigrid," she asked, "wouldn't you like to have that feather as a souvenir?"

"Yes, I'd love it."

"All right, Sigrid," said the President, "you can have it. But since you pinned the feather on me, you'll have to unpin it."

Sigrid lost no time complying. When she left the White House, she was carrying the feather like a trophy, and if her thoughts drifted back to the bitter past, you couldn't tell it from her million-dollar smile.

HI DIDDLE DIDDLE—THE COW JUMPED OVER THE MOON

tion could only be achieved by relaxing price controls.

"My organization wants to see OPA continued," said the Grange leader, "but with limitations that will enable the farmer to produce more."

Goss contended that the shortage of fertilizer was attributable to price ceilings, also that much of the last hay crop was lost because of the delay in granting baling wire manufacturers a price boost to encourage wire production.

Truman replied that he had heard the same arguments many times before and that he realized OPA's management had not been "100 per cent perfect." However, he said he had not changed his position.

one iota from the views set forth in his veto message on the first OPA extension bill sent him by Congress.

"We must have down-the-line price controls," concluded the President. "It is wrong to make specific exemptions in the law favoring certain producers, as some factions in Congress are attempting to do."

West Virginia's able Senator Harley Kilgore recently held an emergency conference with President Truman on a subject close to everyone's stomach—meat. In West Virginia, however, it is especially serious because the meat shortage has decreased coal miner efficiency.

Senator Kilgore who has been working on the problem for some time, even acted as a purchasing agent, and dug up two carloads of canned salmon on the West Coast for sale to the miners.

Kilgore told President Truman that he had already taken up the problem with Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson and Reconstruction Director John Steelman, but neither had any solution. The groceries in the coal areas simply have not been able to get meat, flour, corn meal and dairy products for several months, with the shortage so acute that miners are now talking about a hunger strike.

"But at the same time," Kilgore

"IT SAYS HERE"

By Bub Hope

If your husband tells you he goes to lodge meetings on Friday night, don't believe him. You'll probably find him in a ring-side seat at the local fight arena. . . . Those teeth he brings home didn't come from Elks!

The Friday night fights are fast becoming an American habit, with even women and children to be seen amongst the cheering crowds. I understand the women aren't very much impressed, though. They consider the Friday night fights as merely preliminaries. . . . Their big fight comes off Saturday night when the old man brings home the pay check.

Boxing is a good, clean American sport and the pugilists of today are truly gentlemen. . . . In fact, they won't be seen in the ring without their gloves.

I've always been an avid follower of the manly art and in my youth was quite a fighter, myself. I was full of energy in those days and known for my ability to jump over the ropes. . . . But they kept throwing me back into the ring.

I was really quite popular in my day and you should've heard my fans whistle when I stepped into the ring. . . . I was the only fighter in the business who wore pink trunks. My manager finally persuaded me to give up the ring and become a comedian. He figured as long as I was "panchy" . . . I might as well get paid for it.

I've never regretted my days as a boxer. . . . In fact, my footwork still comes in handy.

told the President, "hotels and restaurants through West Virginia have been able to buy reasonable amounts of meat."

Major reason for the miner food shortage, he explained, is that before the war, miner stores were accustomed to buying direct from the big meat packers rather than through wholesalers. The big packers are in short supply, however, and have had to take care of their wholesaler customers first. In one case, Kilgore told Truman, he found a meat supplier had only five carcasses to supply the meat needs of miners in four counties for a whole week.

Kilgore also pointed out that each miner now has a larger family to feed than before the war.

"The average age of the miner has risen during the war years from about 27 to about 47," he told the President. "The result is not only that the miner must be assured of the food necessary to do his tough job, but he must also have enough food for his family."

"The miners know, Harry, that you took over the mines not long ago," Kilgore reminded Truman, "and they'd like to know why you couldn't take over the farms and food processing plants to insure the distribution of food where it is needed."

The President dodged this question, but assured Kilgore steps will be taken to channel food to the coal fields. He said he would confer with Secretary Anderson about the possibility of channeling food to the West Virginia miners.

Respect Is Necessary

As I have said before, it is bound to result in resentment, deceit and destruction of those attitudes which are most vital to happy marriage. Respect, rather than love, is the keynote of a successful mating. One wonders how any woman with healthy, wife pride can possibly respect a man whom she thinks she has put together like a puzzle or how any man with normal egoism can abide a wife who claims to love him so.

So I repeat—I do not believe that any wife can or should try to mold her husband into some private pattern of her own creation, neither by nagging nor coaxing nor threatening nor weeping nor any other form of feminine hocus pocus. A woman may be helpful and encouraging, she may even lead and inspire her mate by appeals to his love and pride. But a husband who isn't able to "make himself" without a blueprint from the dear little woman should be junked before he takes the first step toward the altar. And thank his lucky star forever after.

LISTEN TO THE WORLD

By ELSIE ROBINSON
(Registered U.S. Patent Office)
I do not believe in "managed" husbands.

I do not believe that wives should supervise their husbands' lives or expect applause for their success. And every time I hear some big male boasting that "I owe all I am to the Dear Little Woman at home," I learn to have an over-ripe tomato.

The reasons for my violent reactions are many. First off, the man's lying and he knows he's lying. Politically, it's a sure though corny way of getting the female vote. But it's never sincere. No man on earth with an atom of self-respect ever truly believed that he owed all he was to any woman. And he pretends to do so, he's up to tricks and will bear watching.

I'm well aware that these statements will brand me as Public Enemy No. 1 with most of the gals. For it is our proudest feminine boast that "all men are just little boys" and that it's up to us women to mold them into something resembling adult human beings. Even the most intelligent women cherish this delusion and are prepared to commit mayhem on a heretic who denies it. But I fail to see where there's any profit in kidding ourselves with such pipe dreams.

Deserves Gratitude
A good and wise wife serves a real, inspiring purpose in her husband's life. She not only deserves but she usually receives his heartfelt gratitude and devotion. But she is not entitled to any congressional medals for "making him what he is today." And, even while he is claiming that she does, the most loyal of husbands knows that it is untrue and begins to accumulate a lifelong resentment which is bound to undermine any honest devotion or mutual respect.

Men are not "just little boys grown up," and nothing makes them madder than the insinuation that they are the product of some little woman's smart manipulation. They like to think—and they think truly—that character building is a one man job. Either you do it for yourself or it isn't done. And if it's a successful job, the man himself, and he alone, deserves the rewards.

This isn't an unnatural nor an ungrateful feeling. It is perfectly right and normal and no man who is worth his salt would react otherwise.

I doubt very much if our great grandfathers worried very greatly over this notion. They were far too busy keeping house and raising babies to wonder who deserved the credit. Their marriages may not have been as romantic as ours are today but they were magnificent examples of teamwork and their respect for each other created a stable and lasting foundation for marriage. Most modern marriages, however, leave a woman with a lot of idle time on her hands, time wherein she can concoct endless fool notions, of which this screwball theory that husbands should be managed by their wives is certainly the craziest.

Respect Is Necessary
As I have said before, it is bound to result in resentment, deceit and destruction of those attitudes which are most vital to a happy marriage. Respect, rather than love, is the keystone of a successful mating. One wonders how any woman with healthy, wifely pride can possibly respect a man whom she thinks she has put together like a picture puzzle or how any man with normal egotism can abide a wife who claims to have done so.

So I repeat—I do not believe that any wife can or should try to mold her husband into some private pattern of her own creation, neither by nagging nor coaxing nor threatening nor weeping nor other feminine hocus pocus. A woman may be helpful and encouraging, she may comfort and inspire her mate by appeals to his love and pride. But a husband who isn't able to "make himself" without a blueprint from the dear little woman should be junked before he takes the first step toward the altar. And thank his lucky star forever after.

Martinsburg Woman Dies In Auto Collision
BEDFORD, Pa., July 21 — Plans for a law festival to be held July 21, were made at the meeting of the Women's Society of Christian Service of Bethel Methodist church, Saturday evening, at the home of Miss Edna Bruner. The festival will be held on the church lawn.

Mrs. June Carheim, president, was in charge of the business session and led the devotion. Following the meeting, a social was held and refreshments were served by the hostess. Fourteen members and one visitor attended.

The next meeting of the group will be August 3 at the home of Mrs. Charles Zembower.

Bethel Women's Society Plans Lawn Festival

The last tour by the association was made in the fall of 1941, wartime travel restrictions putting a crimp in the program since that time. Prior to that date, EPA members in annual trips covered more than 3,000 miles and visited every city in the state of 3,000 population or more at least once.

Producer George White Is Hit-Run Suspect; Newlyweds Are Victims
SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 21 (AP)—George White, 52, who identified himself as the theatrical producer posted particularly for his "George White Scandals," was charged today with suspicion of striking down a newlywed pair with his automobile and speeding away.

He was booked at the San Diego county jail on the statute charges of negligent homicide and felonious failure to stop and give aid.

Officers said the newlyweds, a middle-aged man and his girl bride, had parked their automobile and were crossing the highway after dark last night—their pockets full of souvenir trinkets of their Mexican marriage trip.

White's residence is in Hollywood. The victims were Clara M. and Lee 42, Santa Ana, killed outright at 10:30 last night and his bride, Ann Osborne Lee, 18, who died in a hospital at 10:30 a. m. today.

Author-Composer Dies
ZACATA, Va., July 21 (AP)—James H. Littlefield, 38, author and composer of the tunes and lyrics for the ice shows "Stars on Ice" and "It Happens on Ice," died here yesterday.

Edward Ames, of nearby Montross, Va., said Littlefield died "of heat exhaustion," after being stricken while visiting the Littlefield family farm "Chatham Plantation."

Telephone, Power Service Disrupted By Severe Storm

Cumberland And LaVale Sections Hit By Heavy Rain And Winds

A torrential rain storm which seemed to center over the city and nearby area yesterday at 5:15 p. m., brought relief from the summer heat, but also caused damage to telephone and power installations, gardens, trees and shrubbery, and disrupted vehicular traffic and picnic outings.

Henry Price, manager of the Potomac Edison Company here, said there were several minor power failures reported in the city. These were caused, he explained, when lightning struck power lines or transformers, and blew out fuses. There was no serious damage, he said, and power was restored as soon as fuses could be replaced and the trouble located. There was a 15-minute power failure on the West Side of the city.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company reported several hundred telephones still out of order at 8 p. m., as a result of the storm. Crews of workmen were called out immediately after the storm to service lines and locate trouble. Company officials said the storm seemed to center over LaVale and the West Side, although the rain was pretty general in the city and immediate area. They expressed the opinion some of their cable lines were "drowned out," and some lines may have been knocked down by falling trees or limbs from trees. Linemen and trouble-shooters prepared to work all night to repair damage and restore service.

Subways Flooded

During the heavy rainstorm, water seeped down from nearby hills and mountains in torrents. On several of the steeper slopes, water filled the gutters and ran up over curbs onto sidewalks. Subways at Greene street, Virginia avenue and Winnow street were flooded, and police said traffic was disrupted for 20 minutes. The water finally ran off as over-loaded sewer lines emptied themselves.

On Franklin street, water ran so deep along the curbs that several youngsters took the opportunity for an impromptu swim. They lay prone on the street, and let the swirling rain water splash over them.

Police reported a large limb from a tree at Altamont terrace and Union street was knocked over, downed a tree, and a tree in the 400 block of Fayette street was knocked over during the storm.

Two live-wires, power lines of the Potomac Edison Company, came down and sputtered about the streets until power company employees cut them away. One wire fell on Yale street and another on Cecilia street.

Many Trees Damaged

Along U. S. Route 40, between Cumberland and the LaVale station of Maryland State Police, several trees were blown over and several were struck by lightning. Limbs from more than a dozen trees in the Narrows Park and LaVale section were reported down after the storm.

The heavy mid-summer rainstorm, accompanied by thunder and a strong wind. Huge bolts of lightning flashed across the sky. The rain seemed to come in hard driving sheets, and did considerable damage throughout this area. Gardens in many localities were reported washed out and rain beat down many plants and vegetables.

Pioneers at Constitution Park and other outing areas had their activities interrupted and there was a mad scramble for cars and other available cover. Several baseball games and softball contests were rained out and at Midland, it was reported the ball diamond was flooded until it looked like a swimming pool.

Traffic was interrupted somewhat during the rainstorm and many motorists reported they "pulled over" and sat alongside roads until they could see to proceed. Buses in the

Jack C. Buckle Takes Second Trip To Europe As "Sea-Going Cowboy"

A discharged veteran of Pacific service, Jack C. Buckle, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Buckle, 717 Patterson avenue, is en route to Yugoslavia aboard the Cedar Rapids Victory as a "sea-going cowboy," helping to take 850 cattle to the war-stricken country.

This is Buckle's second trip to Europe with a group helping to care for livestock on the trans-Atlantic voyage. Early in June he sailed for Bremen, Germany, with a crew caring for a shipment of horses.

Buckle, a graduate of Allegheny high school, Buckle enrolled in the freshman class at Juniata college, Huntingdon, Pa., last spring. He was honorably discharged from the army last November after serving 26 months in Australia, New Guinea and the Philippines.

Buckle expects to be back in this country in about four weeks.

Biglin Hearing Set For Today

Released on $26.46 bond, Norman D. Biglin, 301 North Centre street, will be given a hearing this morning in trial magistrates court on charges of leaving the scene of an accident.

Biglin was arrested Saturday night by Lt. James E. Van after two cars were badly damaged and a sailor suffered minor injuries at the North Center North Mechanic streets intersection.

Van said Biglin was traveling north on Mechanic street driving a Dodge sedan when his car collided with a machine driven by Howard Pfister, Cresaptown.

Neither Biglin or Pfister was injured but a sailor in Pfister's car, Russell R. Howler, 25, Washington, reported to Allegheny hospital sometime later and complained of pain in his right hip and leg. He was treated but not admitted.

Biglin was arrested for failing to stop after an accident, and booked at the police station.

Eight Arrest Made In Family Feud At Reynolds

Russell Doman Surrenders To Police; Held In County Jail

Russell Doman, of Reynolds, charged with having fired a shotgun at Lester Myers, during the dispute between the Myers-Doman families last week, on the Flat rock road at Reynolds, is in the county jail, awaiting a hearing or arraignment in trial magistrates court.

Doman, the eighth person arrested by Maryland State Police in what authorities termed a "gun-toting feud," gave himself up to State Trooper A. M. Spioch in West-ernport, Saturday.

The man told Spioch "I heard you were looking for me, but I don't know what for." Spioch read the warrant to him and Doman declared, "There's been a mistake. I don't even have cartridges for my shotgun. It wasn't me fired."

Members of the Myers family who swore out the warrant for Doman, maintain the man shot at Lester Myers from the Doman home as he passed by on his way to work at the Celanese plant. Myers said the shot from the 16 gauge gun kicked up the dust near his feet.

Friday of last week, six members of the Myers family, all charged with assault with intent to kill Theodore Trenum, were arrested in trial magistrates court before Magistrate Frank A. Perdue. Three of them were released and charges against them dismissed. Lester Myers was held for action of the grand jury on a charge of brandishing a pistol; Bruce Myers, Jr., was sentenced to 60 days in jail, and his attorney appealed, and which his mother of the two young men, Mrs. Bruce Myers, Sr., was sentenced to 30 days in jail for kicking Trenum in the head. Sentence was suspended on the grounds that she was probably excited and and instinctively to protect her son Bruce who was on the ground with Trenum in a rough and tumble fight last Monday.

Authorities say there "has been bad blood" between the Myers and Trenum, over the alleged reporting of the Myers family to the OPA for the amount of rent charged for a house.

Trenum, who is a brother-in-law of Russell Doman, passed the Myers house Monday, and a fight ensued between Trenum and Bruce Myers, Jr.

From that time until police entered the picture, the two families engaged in a gun-toting duel and had other residents of the little community in a state of jitter.

The affair was climaxed by the seizure of an arsenal of weapons from the two families by state and county authorities, and culminated Friday with the trial of the Myers family here.

As soon as the families and spectators had jammed the court room and Magistrate Perdue had taken the bench, the Myers family got in the first legal punch by announcing that they wished to swear out warrants against Howard and Russell Doman.

William Ellis's Condition Serious

Allegheny hospital attaches described as serious last night the condition of William A. Ellis, 20, Cresaptown, Celanese employee, who was admitted earlier in the afternoon suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and injuries.

Attendees said Ellis slipped on a diving board at Pleasant Valley Recreation area yesterday afternoon and bumped his head then fell into the water. He was in the water several minutes before being rescued, attaches said.

Ellis, 300 Park street, was treated in Allegheny hospital for a puncture of the left foot. He said he suffered the injury while swimming yesterday.

John Stienst, 12, 309 Bedford street, was treated for a laceration on the back of his head. He told Allegheny hospital attaches he was struck in the head with a tin can while playing at home.

Ruth E. Benard, 5, Springfield, Va., suffered deep lacerations on the back of her head. Allegheny hospital attaches said she was injured when she fell against a bed post at her home.

Delores Funk, 11, daughter of Mrs. Gattie Funk, 535 North Centre street, was treated Saturday night by Dr. H. V. Deming. She suffered injury to the Achilles tendon of her foot. She reportedly was pulling a wagon from in front of a car when the steel tongue struck her on the heel.

Paul Miller, 50, and Charles Cook, 63, 227 Water street, were treated in Memorial hospital Saturday afternoon they fell from a 25 foot scaffold.

Cook was treated for bruises and released. Miller, whose condition was described as good last night, was admitted for observation.

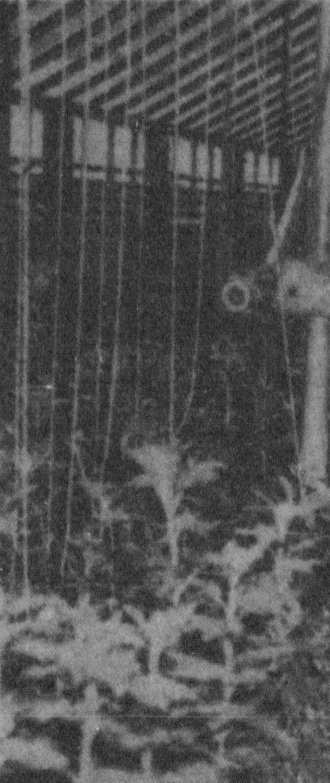

Ivan Leeper, 37, Loudtown, Pa., suffered deep lacerations of the third and fourth fingers on his left hand. He was treated last night in Allegheny hospital.

Legion Installation To Be Held Tuesday

Newly elected officers of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, will be installed tomorrow night at the regular meeting of the post at 8 o'clock at the Legion home, Frank T. Powers, Cresaptown, Md.

Police said Ward was moving south on Mechanic street and entered the Baltimore intersection just as Wolford's car was passing. Both cars were badly damaged, police said, but the drivers escaped injury.

Lt. James E. Van and Officer Fred Daun investigated.

KNOWS HIS FLOWERS—Arthur Phillips (right) watches as his 86-year-old grandfather, John S. Phillips, shows him how to arrange the strings for some of the chrysanthemum plants in the Phillips green house at Lonaconing. The elder Mr. Phillips, who entered the green house business as a hobby many years ago, has just turned his interest in the business over to his grandson. (See story below.)

Mobile Army Team Plans Recruiting Campaign In Area

An army mobile recruiting team will arrive here today to begin a recruiting campaign in the Cumberland area. First Lt. George J. Gocke, in charge of the local army recruiting station, announced yesterday.

Lt. Gocke said the team, a Second army unit, will come here from Baltimore to spend two months in this area. The four sergeants in the team have a trailer equipped as a recruiting office, and will visit various communities in the tri-state area during their stay. They will not conduct a recruiting campaign in Cumberland, the officer added.

The team will remain here to-night and will begin their campaign tomorrow. Lt. Gocke said the team's schedule of operations will be announced later.

Various changes in personnel at the local office were also announced yesterday. Lt. Gocke, who was placed in command following the departure of Capt. Nathan S. P. Stitt, Friday to act as public relations officer at the Baltimore recruiting station, will leave tomorrow for Winchester, Va., where he has been assigned on temporary duty as commanding officer of the Winchester army recruiting station.

Capt. Laurence M. Baisrow, formerly in charge of the local office, will return here today from Salisbury as commanding officer. Capt. Baisrow has been in command of the Salisbury recruiting station since April.

Lt. Gocke, who resides at 837 Gephardt drive, is a veteran of air corps service in the European theater. He was stationed in Baltimore before his assignment to Cumberland.

Recalls Many Incidents
Yesterday he was reminiscing over the years and recalled that day along with many more that carry significance in his 86 years of life. Meeting Mr. Phillips one day, he was impressed by his dress or ostentatious manner, rather by the way he greets you. Or maybe it's the casual acceptance of living 86 years and now being able to recall most any moment of it at the required time.

He's a small man, about 5 feet 2 or 3 inches tall, thin, with a well shaped face not too marked by the years. His hair—it's thin but still covers his head—is gray. He's aggressive and is usually wearing a broad smile. A bit hard of hearing, he wants people to talk loud and sells his example himself. His eyes are "falling," he declares, "but not too much." However he wears a pair of big horn rimmed glasses, and he wears them on the tip of his nose in the style of a patriarch.

A serious man, Mr. Phillips doesn't care too much about discussing the gambols of life. "I'm a butcher by trade," he said yesterday, "this green house business was a hobby that got too big to play with and something had to be done about it."

"You see," the veteran of forty years green house work declared, "I quit the mining business when I was 21, and went to work for Harry Williams as a butcher, then one day I decided to open a shop of my own. That was the last time in my life that I ever drew pay for working for another man."

In 1884, after his previous business venture, Mr. Phillips combined with the late George H. Fresh and on December 22 an advertisement announced the opening of the Fresh and Phillips Meat Market, Main street, Lonaconing.

Married Isabella Tenent
Just a little before he opened his own business, Mr. Phillips met Miss Isabella Ann Tenent, Lonaconing, and on October 26, 1881, they were married. Yesterday with moistened eyes he spoke of his wife and their life together. It would be impossible to talk with him and not realize the important part she played in his life until her death November 29, 1939. "If she were here now, I wouldn't be fooling around so much," he said after he spoke briefly of the 57 years they spent together.

Fresh died in 1896, and Mr. Phillips continued to operate the business under his own name until 1913. Some time during the intervening years he purchased an orchard outside of Lonaconing and began working it as a hobby. That, indirectly, is what led him into the green house business.

He was buying large numbers of vegetable and flower plants from a nearby green house to cultivate the ground between the rows of trees, "a necessary procedure in the orchard business," Mr. Phillips explained. Then one day he decided to build a small green house of his own and save on the cost of plants.

"There's a lot of work connected with the business," he said. "Whether it's a large or small green house the plants have to be watered and temperatures must be adjusted. That's what happened in 1913. Mr. Phillips said he had been in the business since 1913. (Continued on Page 3, Col. 3)

John A. Daugherty Injured In Accident
John A. Daugherty, 18, 329 Fayette street, was admitted to Memorial hospital last night with a possible fractured left leg and lacerations on the back of the head.

Attaches said Daugherty was injured in an automobile accident on Route 28 about a mile north of Short Gap, Va., last night at 9 o'clock. Daugherty said he was not the driver of the car, but told attendants that the automobile skidded from the road, during the downpour of rain.

Trooper L. W. Kelley, West Virginia State Police, said the accident was reported to him and Daugherty was taken to the hospital. The investigation will be completed today in Keyser, W. Va.

Local News In Brief
Central Fire station answered a call Saturday night at 11:20 o'clock to the Buchanan Lumber company, 540 North Centre street. Firemen said a pile of scrap wood was burning in a metal buggy.

Martin Gracey, vice president of the Graham Aviation Company, and general manager of the Johnstown, Pa., airport will speak on the development of air transportation at the Rotary club meeting here tomorrow at 12:15 p. m. in Central YMCA.

John Phillips Quits Lonaconing Green House Business At Age 86

Began Working In Moss Run Mine When He Was Only 9-Years-Old

By JOHN P. MOODY

He refuses to give up.

In 1921 John S. Phillips, Lonaconing merchant, read his biographical sketch and learned that he was retiring. He was 61 then. This month at 86, Mr. Phillips has decided to quit laughing at the idea and turn his greenhouse business over to his grandson, Arthur Phillips.

But to say he is retiring would be as incorrect today as it was in 1921. He is merely leaving another business, the greenhouse business, to a fresher and more opportune field. From now on the one-time coal miner, butcher and more recently green house proprietor will be associated with the business of improving and renting property.

In fact, Mr. Phillips recipe for a long life is contrary to such things as retirement. He advocates doing something constructive all of the time and having the work planned well in advance.

It would be difficult to imagine what John Phillips was planning that June morning in 1889, when his father showed him the way to Moss Run mine, a couple of miles above Glossburg, Pa., or if he had any plan besides loading as many coal cars as a 9-year old boy is capable, and getting paid for it.

Yesterday he was reminiscing over the years and recalled that day along with many more that carry significance in his 86 years of life. Meeting Mr. Phillips one day, he was impressed by his dress or ostentatious manner, rather by the way he greets you. Undergarment Workers To Hold Meeting Today
Picketing at the Cumberland Undergarment Company, 917 Gay street, will begin at 7 o'clock today to resume operations, Mrs. Marguerite Chase, committee chairman, of the local said last night.

The strike now entering the fifth day has been termed unauthorized by local 434, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL. Mrs. Chase said employees of the undergarment plant will meet this morning, but said a definite place has not yet been selected. No attempt has been made to begin negotiations, either by the company or employees, Mrs. Chase reported, and added that workers are still demanding a 20 cents hourly increase and adjustment of piece rate work.

Textile Workers Planning Program Of Price Control

Cooperative Buying And Other Ideas To Go Before Members

A meeting of the general membership of Local 1874, Textile Workers of America, has been called for Wednesday at 7:30 p. m., for the purpose of planning a program of action to help keep prices down to reasonable levels, according to William Boyd Coleman, president.

A series of meetings in various nearby towns within the jurisdiction of Local 1874, has already been scheduled, and given wide publicity.

Among ideas to be discussed by the general membership, Coleman said, will be the advisability of establishing some sort of co-operative buying and selling plan for members of the union. Plans are being considered, he declared, to purchase food-stuffs in large quantities from farmers and producers, and re-distributing them at cost to textile workers and their families.

This idea, Coleman believes, will help keep prices down, and will provide considerable competition to merchants who are inclined to raise prices, now that OPA has expired.

Members are also being urged, Coleman declared to buy no luxury goods, and confine all purchases to the barest necessities.

Declaring that "the behavior of Congress, since July 1, demonstrates that it is willing to expose the American people to the risks of disastrous inflation, in order to gain advantages for certain commodity groups," Coleman said the veto of the OPA bill by President Truman, gave Congress a chance to redeem itself. Congress was given a second opportunity to offer a workable price control measure, but has refused to take this opportunity, Coleman said.

Basing his conclusions on figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics Index of Basic Commodities, Coleman explained that a study shows that in the first 10 days of July, "prices on basic foods and raw materials went up more than during the last three years of price control, and during the next few weeks, the full impact of these rises in wholesale prices will hit the retailer."

Coleman said a five-point program of action will be considered by the local. It calls for: Keeping a record of votes of Congress members so as to take suitable action in November, mobilization of public opinion, preparation of a list of purchases to hold members, join movements to hold rents at the June 30 level, and to refuse to buy things which can be done without.

Local Guard Units Leave For Summer Camp Next Sunday
Company C and Company D, Eighth Battalion Maryland State Guard, will leave the state armory next Sunday at 8 a. m. by truck convoy to spend a week at Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md. Capt. Lester Bollinger said last night.

Capt. Bollinger, who commands Company D, said he will take 32 members of his unit to the summer camp, while Capt. Thomas F. Conlon, who commands Company C expects to take 32 men.

The camp schedule this year is a little lighter than the wartime training periods of the state guard, Capt. Bollinger said last night. Considerable time has been allotted for supervised athletics and recreation periods. Each unit is to spend two full days on the rifle range, Capt. Bollinger said.

Army trucks will come here Sunday to haul the men and their equipment to Camp Ritchie. The local units, traveling in truck convoys will meet Hagerstown units of the battalion at 10 a. m. and will form a larger convoy to the camp, Bollinger said.

The units will remain in camp for one week, returning to their home stations August 4.

Telephone, Power Service Disrupted By Severe Storm

Cumberland And LaVale Sections Hit By Heavy Rain And Winds

A torrential rain storm which seemed to center over the city and nearby area yesterday at 5:15 p. m. brought relief from the summer heat, but also caused damage to telephone and power installations, gardens, trees and shrubbery, and disrupted vehicular traffic and picnic outings.

Henry W. Price, manager of the Potomac Edison Company here, said there were several minor power failures reported in the city. These were caused, he explained, when lightning struck power lines or transformers, and blew out fuses. There was no serious damage, he said, and power was restored as soon as fuses could be replaced and the trouble located. "There was a 15-minute power failure on the West Side of the city."

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company reported several hundred telephones still out of order at 8 p. m. as a result of the storm. Crews of workmen were called out immediately after the storm to service lines and locate trouble. Company officials said the storm seemed to center over LaVale and the West Side, although the rain was pretty general in the city and immediate area. They expressed the opinion that some of the cable lines were "drowned out," and some lines may have been knocked down by falling trees or limbs from trees. Linemen and trouble-shooters prepared to work all night to repair damage and restore service.

Subways Flooded

During the heavy rainstorm, water swept down from nearby hills and mountains in torrents. On several of the steeper slopes, water filled the gutters and ran up over curbs onto sidewalks. Subways at Curve street, Virginia avenue and Winnow street were flooded, and police said traffic was disrupted for 20 minutes. The water finally ran off as over-loaded sewer lines emptied themselves.

On Franklin street, water ran so fast along the curbs, that several youngsters took the opportunity for an impromptu swim. They lay prone on the street, and let the swirling rain water splash over them.

Police reported a large limb from a tree at Altamont terrace and Union street was knocked or blown from a tree and fell in the 400 block of Fayette street, was knocked over during the storm.

Two live-wire, power lines of the Potomac Edison Company, came down and sputtered about the streets until power company employees cut them away. One was reported on Yale street and another on Cecilia street.

Many Trees Damaged

Along U. S. Route 40, between Cumberland and the LaVale station of Maryland State Police, several trees were blown over and limbs were struck by lightning. Some from more than a dozen trees in the Narrows Park and LaVale section were reported down after the storm.

Heavy mid-summer rainstorm, was accompanied by thunder and a strong wind. Huge bolts of lightning flashed across the sky. The rain seemed to come in hard driving sheets, and did considerable damage throughout this area. Gardens in many localities were reported washed out and laid down many plants and vegetables.

Pioneers at Constitution Park and other outing areas had their activities interrupted and there was a mad scramble for cars and other available cover. Several baseball games and softball contests were rained out at Midland, Hunt-Indradon, Pa. last spring. He was honorably discharged from the army last November after serving 26 months in Australia, New Guinea and the Philippines.

Buckle expects to be back in this country in about four weeks.

Jack C. Buckle Takes Second Trip To Europe As "Sea-Going Cowboy"

A discharged veteran of Pacific service, Jack C. Buckle, 32, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Buckle, 717 Patterson avenue, is en route to Yugoslavia aboard the Cedar Rapids Victory as a "sea-going cowboy," helping to take 800 cattle to the war-torn country.

This is Buckle's second trip to Europe with a group helping to care for livestock on the trans-Atlantic voyage. Early in June he sailed for Bremen, Germany, with a crew caring for a shipment of horses.

A graduate of Allegheny high school, Buckle enrolled in the freshman class at Juniata college, Hunt-Indradon, Pa. last spring. He was honorably discharged from the army last November after serving 26 months in Australia, New Guinea and the Philippines.

Buckle expects to be back in this country in about four weeks.

Biglin Hearing Set For Today

Released on $200 bond, Norman D. Biglin, 301 North Centre street, will be given a hearing this morning in trial magistrates court on charges of leaving the scene of an accident.

Biglin was arrested Saturday night by Lt. James E. Van after two cars were badly damaged and a sailor suffered minor injuries at the North Centre, North Mechanic streets intersection.

Biglin said Biglin was traveling north on Mechanic street, driving a Dodge sedan when his car collided with a machine driven by Howard Pfister, Cresaptown.

Neither Biglin or Pfister was injured but a sailor in Pfister's car, Russell R. Howler, 25, Washington, reported to Allegheny hospital some time last Sunday complained of pain in his right hip and leg. He was treated but not admitted.

Biglin was arrested for failing to stop after an accident, and booked at the police station.

FELLED BY STORM—Many residents in and around Cumberland reported large trees blown down or struck by lightning yesterday during the heavy rain, thunder and wind storm which swept the city at 5:15 p. m. This one, an old wild cherry tree, narrowly missed falling on the house of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Hull, on U. S. Route 40, near the intersection of Mt. Savage road. Hull was on the porch when the tree crashed down in front of him. He said he was interested at the time in removing a fish bowl from the porch, so it wouldn't be blown off and broken, and didn't realize the tree was falling, until it dropped in front of him. Hull, a Western Maryland crossing watchman on North Mechanic street said he did not think the tree was struck by lightning, but was blown over by the wind and driving rain. Mrs. Hull said the tree was a large one when the family moved there 20 years ago.

Other Allegheny county delegates to the convention are Harry H. Robinson, Morgan C. Harris, and Mrs. Charles M. See, all of Cumberland; John W. Hanna, Westernport; John Turnbull, Lonaconing; and William Zeller, Frostburg.

Tait said a committee headed by Enos S. Stockbridge has completed its draft of a proposed state party platform, to be submitted to the convention's platform committee as soon as it is organized Monday.

The state chairman also outlined a proposed realignment of party organization. He suggested state committee members elect a man and a woman to serve as vice-chairman in each of the six congressional districts.

Tait also proposed that party officials, in conjunction with statewide candidates, select a state chairman, campaign manager and an assistant campaign manager, and create a policy committee to work with the state chairman on organization, policy, management and financing of the campaign.

The state chairman said these measures would "broaden party management and responsibility, intensify and decentralize campaign work, and give greater recognition to women."

The proposals will be laid before the new state central committee at its organization meeting immediately following the convention. The convention itself is called for 12:30 p. m. in the ballroom of the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

Eighth Arrest Made In Family Feud At Reynolds

Russell Doman Surrenders To Police; Held In County Jail

Russell Doman, of Reynolds, charged with having fired a shotgun at Lester Myers, during the dispute between the Myers-Doman families last week, on the Flat rock road at Reynolds, is in the county jail, awaiting a hearing or arraignment in trial magistrates court.

Doman, the eighth person arrested by Maryland State Police in what authorities termed a "gun-toting feud," gave himself up to State Trooper A. M. Spioch in Westernport, Saturday.

The man told Spioch "I heard you were looking for me, but I don't know what for." Spioch read the warrant to him and Doman declared "There's been a mistake. I don't even have cartridges for my shotgun. It wasn't me fired."

Members of the Myers family who swore out the warrant for Doman, maintain the man shot at Lester Myers from the Doman home as young Myers passed the house en route to work at the Celanese plant.

Myers said the shot from the 16 gauge gun kicked up the dust near his feet.

Friday of last week, six members of the Myers family, all charged with assault with intent to kill Theodore Tremum, were arraigned in trial magistrates court before Magistrate Frank A. Perdue. Three of them were released and charges against them dismissed. Lester Myers was held for action of the grand jury on a charge of brandishing a pistol; Bruce Myers, Jr., was sentenced to 60 days in jail, which his attorney appealed, and the mother of the two young men, Mrs. Bruce Myers, Sr., was sentenced to 30 days in jail for kicking Tremum in the head. Sentence was suspended on the grounds "that she was probably excited" and "that she was instinctively to protect her son Bruce who was on the ground with Tremum in a rough and tumble fight last Monday."

Authorities say there "has been bad blood" between the Myers and Tremum, over the alleged reporting of the Myers family to the OPA for the amount of rent charged for a house.

Tremum, who is a brother-in-law of Russell Doman, passed the Myers house Monday, and a fight ensued between Tremum and Bruce Myers, Jr.

From that time until police entered the picture, the two families engaged in a "gun-toting duel" and had other "rough" encounters in the community in a state of jitters.

The affair was climaxed by the seizure of an arsenal of weapons from the two families by state and county authorities, and culminated Friday with the trial of the Myers family here.

As soon as the families and spectators had jammed the court room, Magistrate Perdue had taken the bench, the Myers family got in the first legal punch by announcing that they wished to swear out warrants against Howard and Russell Doman.

William Ellis's Condition Serious

Allegheny hospital attaches described as serious last night the condition of William A. Ellis, 20, Cresaptown, Celanese employee, who was admitted earlier in the afternoon suffering from a possible fractured skull and spinal injuries.

Mobile Army Team Plans Recruiting Campaign In Area

An army mobile recruiting team will arrive here today to begin a recruiting campaign in the Cumberland area. First Lt. George J. Gocke, in charge of the local army recruiting station, announced yesterday.

Lt. Gocke said the team, a Second army unit, will come here from Baltimore to spend two months in this area. The four sergeants in the team have a trailer equipped as a recruiting office, and will visit various communities in the tri-state area during their stay. They will not conduct a recruiting campaign in Cumberland, the officer added.

The team will remain here tonight and will begin their campaign tomorrow. Lt. Gocke said the team's schedule of operations will be announced later.

Various changes in personnel at the local office were also announced yesterday. Lt. Gocke, who was placed in command following the departure of Capt. Nathan S. P. Stitt, Friday to act as public relations officer at the Baltimore recruiting station, will leave tomorrow for Winchester, Va., where he has been assigned on temporary duty as commanding officer of the Winchester army recruiting station.

Capt. Laurence M. Bairstow, formerly in charge of the local office, will return here today from Salisbury as commanding officer. Capt. Bairstow has been in command of the Salisbury recruiting station since April.

Recalls Many Incidents
Yesterday he was reminiscing over the years and recalled that day along with many more that carry significance in his 86 years of life. Meeting Mr. Phillips one is impressed, not by his dress or ostentatious manner, rather by the way he greets you. His hair—it's thin but still covers his head—is gray. He is aggressive and is usually wearing a broad smile. A bit hard of hearing, he wants people to talk loud and sets the example himself. His eyes are "failing," he declares, "but not too much." However he wears a pair of big horn rimmed glasses, and he wears them on the tip of his nose in the style of a patriarch.

A serious man, Mr. Phillips doesn't care too much about discussing the gambols of life. "I'm a butcher by trade," he said yesterday, "this green house business was a hobby that got too big to play with and something had to be done about it."

"You see," the veteran of forty years green house work declared, "I quit the mining business when I was 21, and went to work for Harry Williams as a butcher, then one day I decided to open a shop of my own. That was the last time in my life that I ever drew pay for working for another man."

In 1884, after his previous business venture, Mr. Phillips combined with the late George H. Fresh and on December 22 an advertisement announced the opening of the Fresh and Phillips Meat Market, Main street, Lonaconing.

Married Isabella Tenant
Just a little before he opened his own business, Mr. Phillips met Miss Isabella Ann Tenant, Lonaconing, and on October 26, 1881, they were married. Yesterday with moistened eyes he spoke of his wife and their life together. It would be impossible to talk with him and not realize the important part she played in his life until her death November 29, 1938. "If she were here now, I wouldn't be fooling around so much," he said after he spoke briefly of the 57 years they spent together.

Fresh died in 1896, and Mr. Phillips continued to operate the business under his own name until 1913. Sometime during the intervening years he purchased an orchard outside of Lonaconing and began working it as a hobby. That, indirectly, is what led him into the green house business.

He was buying large numbers of vegetable and flower plants from a nearby green house to cultivate the ground between the rows of trees. "As necessary procedure in the orchard business," Mr. Phillips explained. Then one day he decided to build a small green house of his own and save on the cost of plants.

"There's a lot of work connected with the business," he said. "Whether it's a large or small green house the plants have to be watered and temperatures must be adjusted." That's what happened in 1913. Mr. (Continued on Page 3, Col. 3)

John A. Daugherty Injured In Accident
John A. Daugherty, 18, 329 Fayette street, was admitted to Memorial hospital last night with a possible fractured left leg and lacerations on the back of the head.

Attaches said Daugherty was injured in an automobile accident on Route 28 about a mile north of Short Gap, W. Va., last night at 7 o'clock. Daugherty said he was not the driver of the car, but told attendants that the automobile skidded from the road, during the downpour of rain.

Trooper L. W. Kelley, West Virginia State Police, said the accident was reported to him and Daugherty was the only person injured. The investigation will be completed today in Keyser, W. Va.

Local News In Brief
Central Fire station answered a call Saturday night at 11:30 o'clock to the Buchanan Lumber company, 940 North Centre street. Firemen said a pile of scrap wood was burning in a metal bucket.

Martin Gracey, vice president of the Graham Aviation Company, and general manager of the Johnstown, Pa., airport will speak on the development of air transportation at the Rotary club meeting here tomorrow at 12:15 p. m. in Central YMCA.

John Phillips Quits Lonaconing Green House Business At Age 86

Began Working In Moss Run Mine When He Was Only 9-Years-Old

By JOHN P. MOODY

He refuses to give up.

In 1921 John S. Phillips, Lonaconing merchant, read his biographical sketch and learned that he was retiring. He was 61 then. This month at 86, Mr. Phillips has decided to quit working at the idea and turn his green house business over to his grandson, Arthur Phillips.

But to say he is retiring would be as incorrect today as it was in 1921. He is merely leaving another business, rather by the way he has been working at the green house business over to his grandson, Arthur Phillips.

But to say he is retiring would be as incorrect today as it was in 1921. He is merely leaving another business, rather by the way he has been working at the green house business over to his grandson, Arthur Phillips.

In fact, Mr. Phillips recipe for a long life is contrary to such things as retirement. He advocates doing something constructive all of the time and having the work planned well in advance.

It would be difficult to imagine what John Phillips was planning that June morning in 1869, when his father showed him the way to Moss Run mine, a couple of miles above Glosburg, Pa., or if he had any plan besides leading as many coal cars as a 9-year old boy is capable, and getting paid for it.

Textile Workers Planning Program Of Price Control

Cooperative Buying And Other Ideas To Go Before Members

A meeting of the general membership of Local 1874, Textile Workers of America, has been called for Wednesday at 7:30 p. m., for the purpose of planning a program of action to help keep prices down to reasonable levels, according to William Boyd Coleman, president.

A series of meetings in various nearby towns within the jurisdiction of Local 1874, has already been scheduled, and given wide publicity. Among ideas to be discussed by the general membership, Coleman said, will be the advisability of establishing some sort of co-operative buying and selling plan for members of the union. Plans are being considered, he declared, to purchase food-stuffs in large quantities from farmers and producers, and re-distributing them at cost to textile workers and their families.

This idea, Coleman believes, will help keep prices down, and will provide considerable competition to merchants who are inclined to raise prices, now that OPA has expired.

Members are also being urged, Coleman declared to buy no luxury goods, and confine all purchases to the bare necessities.

Declaring that "the behavior of Congress, since July 1, demonstrate that it is willing to expose the American people to the risks of disastrous inflation, in order to gain advantages for certain commodity groups," Coleman said the veto of the OPA bill by President Truman, gave Congress a chance to redeem itself. Congress was given a second opportunity to offer a workable price control measure, but has refused to take this opportunity, Coleman said.

Basing his conclusions on figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Coleman explained that a study shows that in the first 10 days of July, "prices on basic foods and raw materials went up more than during the last three years of price control, and during the next few weeks, the full impact of these rises in wholesale prices for union members, join movements to hold rents at the June 30 level, and to refuse to buy things which can be done without.
